Shut Session Probe Is Set

Yesterday's closed meeting of the Sausalito School District board, to formulate charges against Martin Luther King School Principal Sidney F. Walton Jr., will be investigated by the Marin County district attorney's office, according to Asst. Dist. Atty. Gary W. Thomas.

Thomas said his office will seek to determine whether the 7 a.m. meeting was held in violation of the Ralph M. Brown act, the state's antisecrecy law, which requires public bodies to provide the news media with 24-hour advance notice of closed meetings.

The confidential list of charges, approved by the board at a brief open meeting following the closed session, was to have been delivered to Walton sometime yesterday, according to Sausalito Supt. Phillip W. Schneider. In order to remove the black principal, fired May 4 by trustees, the charges and answers to them and a court hearing will be necessary since his contract has already been renewed.

The board's notice of the yesterday's session was not delivered to the Independent-Journal until 10 a.m. yesterday, three hours after the meeting was scheduled.

Last November the district attorney's office launched a similar investigation when record of a pay raise given to James T. Toliver Jr., King vice principal, could not be found in the minutes of any board meeting.

At that time the district attorney's office said there was not sufficient evidence for a criminal complaint to be issued against the district for violation of the Brown Act.

FLEEING HOME — Vietnamese villagers rush to board a South Vietnamese landing craft at a Cambodian village on the Mekong River on their way to refugee camps in South Vietnam's western Mekong Delta. About 1,200 Vietnamese boarded ships at the village, Phu Serei, to be taken to the camps. The ship is part of a 140-boat flotilla going up the river to Phnom Penh.

Allies Also To Go In June

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (UPI) —A White House official said Saturday South Vietnamese troops will pull out of Cambodia sometime around the end of June, at the same time U.S. forces complete their sweep through communist border sanctuaries.

The official — who would not be quoted by name — said the United States had received assurance the scope of South Vietnam's operations in Cambodia is limited, and added there is every reason to believe the operations will conclude at the same time the American sweep ends.

He indicated, however, that although the thrust by American troops across the border was a one-time sweep to knock out supply areas, South Vietnamese troops and possibly American air power may be used later to halt North Vietnamese attempts to rebuild the sanctuaries.

The official, backgrounding reporters at Nixon's Florida headquarters on the situation in Cambodia, described the current counter-attacks by North Vietnamese forces there as efforts to inflict casualties rather than recapture the weapons and supplies seized by the advancing allies.

These supplies, he said, already amounted to enough arms and material to equip 40 North Vietnamese battalions. Their seizure, according to this source, seriously reduced the effectiveness of an estimated 10,000 North Vietnamese who were infiltrating down the Ho Chi Minh trail into the third and fourth corps areas—the Mekong Delta and populous regions around Saigon.

HAMILTON HALTS ITS OPEN HOUSE

'Extremely Sorry' Base Official Joins Other Bases Dropping Armed Forces Day

The traditional Armed Forces Day open house at Hamilton Air Force Base, which had been scheduled for today, was canceled late yesterday "for security reasons" because of the planned nationwide antiwar demonstrations at military installations.

The decision came about 5 o'clock last night. Several Armed Forces Day observances at other bases around the country had been canceled earlier yesterday in view of the announced "first nationwide GI antiwar protest."

The Hamilton decision was made by Col. Mervin Taylor, commander of the First Fighter-Interceptor Wing.

The planned demonstrations forced cancellation of open house events at such major bases as Fort Ord, Fort Benning, Ga., Key West Naval Air Station and the Great Lakes Naval Training Center.

Hamilton information officers would not elaborate on the cancellation except to cite security reasons.

There had been speculation that thousands of protestors who had planned to demonstrate at Fort Ord in Monterey would turn to Hamilton after it was announced that the Army's basic training facility would be closed today. No demonstrators had appeared outside Hamilton as of 10 a.m. this morning, however.

Lt. Co. Everett C. Brown base information officer, said he had been beseiged by phone calls from people distressed over cancellation of the open house. About 15,000 persons had been expected to visit the base today.

"The canceling of this event really distresses me," Brown said. The late announcement made it difficult for base officials to notify the public that the gates would be closed to all but persons on official business.

The base had planned a full day of events, including "flybys" of various kinds of aircraft, a concert, rocket firing demonstrations, a fashion show, sentry dog demonstrations and aerial demonstrations.

Base officials said an open house would be held at a later date and would be announced well in advance.

Eight Nabbed In Half-Ton Weed Raid

Eight persons were arrested in two separate, but connected narcotics raids last night in Tamalpais Valley and Fairfax that yielded a half ton of marijuana and more than $20,000 in cash.

The raids, conducted by the Marin County Drug Abuse Bureau, state and federal agents and Fairfax police, also collected an ounce of what is apparently either heroin or cocaine, Lt. James Schwedhelm of the county drug abuse bureau reported today.

Armed with search warrants, agents first raided the Tamalpais Valley residence, whose location was unidentified. Booked at the Marin County Jail at about 1 a.m. today on suspicion of possessing marijuana for sale were Sandra Richards, 26, of 240 Mountain View Avenue, Mill Valley; Jerry Edward Stanford and Norman Novitsky, both 24, of no known address; Ivan Manuel Kezsbom, 23, of 323 Molino Avenue, Mill Valley, and Donald William Crossley Jr., 25, of 87 Corte Madera Avenue, Mill Valley.

Stanford, who also uses the name Michael Gene Ludwig,

Viet Reds Attack Key Cambodia City

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist troops beyond the range of the U.S. offensive attacked the major Cambodian city of Kompong Cham Saturday and heavy fighting was reported. Cambodian commanders rushed reinforcements toward the front but part of a vital supply road was cut.

North Vietnamese and Viet Cong units appeared to be stepping up operations as the 16-day U.S. drive into Cambodia was deescalating.

Headquarters announced that one U.S. thrust across the Vietnamese border had ended with the withdrawal of 5,000 Americans. About 10,000 GIs remained on Cambodian soil but President Nixon has promised to get all of them out by June 30.

As fighting raged around Kompong Cham Saturday, U.S. fighter-bombers and helicopter gunships mauled a convoy of North Vietnamese trucks moving deeper into the Cambodian jungles with supplies the Communists were trying to save from the American offensive in the Fishhook area.

Field reports said the American aircraft knocked out six of the trucks and triggered two secondary explosions, indicating that the vehicles were packed with ammunition hauled from Communist caches being searched out by men of the U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division.

"We had been assaulting this huge cache site for two days, yet they (the Communists) still pushed a 15-truck convoy in there to try to extract some of the equipment they had stored," said Col. Edward C. Meyer, chief of staff of the 1st Cavalry Division.

Meyer predicted heavy attacks by Communist troops on U.S. troops in the Fishhook. North Vietnamese infrantrymen attacked two U.S. artillery bases in the area on separate nights this week, killing six Americans.

Military sources in the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh, 50 miles southwest of Kompong Cham, said Communist forces had occupied the town of Tonle Bet on the east bank of the Mekong River across from Kompong Cham.

The sources said at least two battalions of North Vietnamese and Viet Cong—about 1,000 men —were trying to encircle Kompong Cham and cut Highway 7 running down to Phnom Penh. Some sections of the road were reported in Communist hands.

Although Nixon's 21-mile limit presumably does not apply to air operations in Cambodia, the start of monsoon rains was already hampering American pilots over the Fishhook. U.S.

Peace Panel Revival Proposed As Pacific, Asia Nations Talk

JAKARTA (UPI) — Twelve Asian and Pacific nations Saturday called for the revival of the defunct International Control Commission as a first step toward restoring peace in Cambodia.

Nearly all participants in a Cambodian crisis conference that opened here Saturday urged the removal of all foreign troops — Communist or otherwise — from the troubled Southeast Asian country.

Government ministers from Japan, the Philippines, South Vietnam, Thailand, Australia, New Zealand, Indonesia, Laos, Singapore, Malaysia, South Korea and Cambodia are holding the two-day meeting in Jakarta in the first major attempt by Asians to solve an Asian problem.

The conference is expected to end Sunday with a joint communique spelling out a common policy on the Cambodian crisis.

Cambodian foreign minister Yem Sambaur made an impassioned plea to the other delegations for military assistance, excluding troops.

Sambaur, who is attending as an observer and not a full participant in the meeting, said Communist forces occupy 2,187 square miles of territory in 10 provinces in his country.

The Communists, he said, "have purely and simply annexed parts of our territory

Garage Booby Trap Wounds A Teen-Ager

A 16-year-old San Anselmo youth was shot in the face last night by a .22 caliber pistol rigged as a booby trap as he and another youth allegedly attempted to burglarize a San Anselmo garage.

Stephen Bendeinelli of 109 Spring Grove Avenue was listed in fair condition today at Kaiser Foundation Hospital, San Francisco, with a buller still lodged in the back of his throat.

A hospital spokesman said Bendeinelli underwent surgery for two hours last night for a damaged upper pallet but the bullet was not removed, apparently in fear of damage to a vital vein near the slug.

San Anselmo police said Bendeinelli and a friend, Robert J. Formichi, 15, of 307 Oak Avenue, San Anselmo, were attempting to open the garage at the Donald L. Ceballos residence at 360 Oak Avenue, San Anselmo, when Bendeinelli was shot.

Officers said a target revolver was found nailed to a post outside the garage with a wire leading to the garage door. They said the weapon, aimed head high at the garage door, was rigged to discharge when the door was opened.

Police said Caballos admitted setting the trap Tuesday after earlier attempts had been made to break into his garage, where he said he was repariing a motorcycle.

Fornichi has been cited to juvenile authorities.

CAMBODIA FUND CURB ASSURED?

Mansfield Declared Amendments Have The Votes; Nixon Forces Still Battle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said Saturday that legislation to end U. S. operations in Cambodia "has the votes" to pass despite intense White House opposition and Republican efforts to work out a compromise.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, cosponsor of the amendment to cut off funds for American ground or air operations in Cambodia, meantime accused the White House of using "massive political pressures" in an effort to defeat the proposal.

The amendment, sponsored by Church and Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., would end funding of U. S. operations in Cambodia. It would not take effect until after June 30, the date by which Nixon promised complete U. S. withdrawal from Cambodia.

"I think Cooper-Church has the votes," Mansfield told newsmen Saturday, disagreeing with Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott's statement that neither side was sure of Senate victory on the issue.

Mansfield ruled out a compromise, which Scott has sought to hammer out although the White House has insisted it opposes any legislation limiting the President's powers. "Frankly, I don't think Church-Cooper is strong enough," Mansfield said. "But it's a start."

He said the Senate would hold initial votes next week, probably on proposed changes in the amendment or substitutes for it. If passed by the Senate, the amendment then would be considered by the House.

'M.A.S.H.' Wins

CANNES, France (AP) — The irreverent, sexy and antiestablishment American film "M.A.S.H." won the International Grand Prix of the Cannes Film Festival today, followed by an Italian feature called "Investigation of a Citizen Beyond Suspicion" in runnerup position.

Marin Bakes Under Smog

Marin baked again today under smoggy skies after suffering through temperatures in the 90s yesterday. The forecast called for continued hot weather but slightly lower temperatures than yesterday.

Sausalito reported a high of 98 degrees and San Rafael reached 96 yesterday. The high in Woodacre was 94, and Bolinas reported 89 degrees.

Low temperatures ranged through 40 degrees in much of the county, with Sausalito reporting an overnight low of 58 and San Rafael a low of 59.

San Francisco sweltered at 91 degrees yesterday, highest in history for May 15. Santa Rosa topped local reports with 102 degrees.

WORKERS HEED BOY'S HOPES TO SAVE BUSH

So the housing development workmen bulldozed around the bush, leaving it in an island of sod amidst a large, cleared field. And Jim Sharvin's Mothers' Day gift was complete.

Jim's mother, Mrs. Robert Sharvin of Richmond, said she would like some lilacs for Mother's Day. Jim, 13, gathered a bouquet from a bush at a friend's home.

As Mrs. Sharvin sniffed them, she reflected that it would be nice to have a bush in her own yard.

Jim and his mother knew there were lilac bushes on land being cleared for a housing development, and they picked one.

"We tried to dig it out, but the ground was too hard," Mrs. Sharvin said.

She and Jim attached the tag to the bush, intending to return.

The next day they noticed the bulldozers had been at work. But in the center of the cleared land was a tuft of turf and their lilac bush intact.

Rain had softened the ground and Jim was able to dig it up.

Eugene Fields and Jim Miller, workmen for DeBolt Construction Co. said they figured whoever had marked the push wanted it pretty badly because they saw the digging all around it.

Bay Pickets Snarl Untangled

Thousands of Marin commuters were stranded in San Francisco yesterday when Greyhound buses were halted by the wildcat Teamster strike that spread from Los Anglees this week.

Teamster pickets were withdrawn from the Bay Area last night after a three-hour meeting with union officials and San Francisco Mayor Joseph L. Alioto, but too late to help about 3,800 Marin commuters who ride Greyhound.

Greyhound also suspended service to Contra Costa County and the Peninsula, and AC Transit buses in the East Bay were delayed by the pickets.

Greyhound employees in San Rafael reported today that service was back to normal and that normal commute runs will be made Monday.

The pickets are Los Angeles truck drivers and their sympathizers. The drivers went out on a wildcat strike six weeks ago protesting a new national contract which did not provide paid sick leave for them.

This week, some strikers came north and threw up picket lines that affected taxis, truck deliveries, airport buses, the commute buses, San Francisco newspapers and the city's waterfront. Longshoreman yesterday observed the picket line and the waterfront closed down. Major truck terminals were closed all week.

Before yesterday's settlement, which only involved the Bay Area picketing, the pickets had ignored restraining orders issued by the courts and pleas by national Teamster officers to halt the picketing, and the walkout had spread to Sacramento, Stockton and Fresno trucking terminals.

Alioto and Los Angeles Mayor San Yorty have offered to help mediate the strike.

Malcolm Boyd, spokesman for the California Trucking Association, said the pickets had closed only 25 per cent of trucking operations in Southern California but had been much more effective in the Bay Area. Losses are estimated at $2 million a day in Southern California and several hundred thousand dollars here.

With no delivery drivers, the San Francisco Examiner did not publish yesterday or Thursday, and the Chronicle did not publish yesterday. This morning the Chronicle published a 12-page tabloid size paper, and the Examiner was working on a 10-page paper, a third the usual Saturday size.

A major issue in the Los Angeles strike now is amnesty for 12,000 drivers fired by trucking companies when they refused to report for work.

HOT AND LONELY TASK

A lone fireman pours water into flames in the penthouse of the San Francisco Merchandise Mart. A five-alarm fire destroyed the two top floors of the building early last evening, doing nearly $1 million damage and requiring 250 firemen and 54 pieces of equipment for more than an hour to control. Downtown traffic, already snarled by the wildcat teamsters' strike (see story on page 1) was further tangled for three hours by the mart blaze. (AP Wirephoto)

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Female Generals

WASHINGTON (AP) — With female complaints that it's a man's world heard all the way to the Pentagon, President Nixon has nominated two 28-year veterans to be the Army's first women generals.

Only the U.S. Senate now stands between the eagle that signifies the nominees' colonel rank and the single star of a brigadier general. It is a promotion that until three years ago wasn't even authorized and until Friday had never actually been made.

Col. Elizabeth P. Hoisington, director of the Women's Army Corps, and Col. Anna Mae Hays, chief of the Army Nurse Corps, were not anxious to attribute their promotions to the spreading and increasingly hot public campaigns to improve the relative position of American women in business, government and other areas outside the home.

Africa Envoy

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (UPI) —President Nixon today chose John G. Hurd, Laredo, Tex. oil and cattleman to be U.S. Ambassador to the Republic of South Africa.

Nixon previously named Hurd, his presidential campaign manager in Texas, to be ambassador to Venezuela. The appointment was withdrawn at Hurd's request last August after Venezuelans protested his ties with Texas oil interests.

Latin Vote On

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (UPI)—Voting in a presidential election preceded by campaign violence that killed at least 68 persons began at 6 a.m. today with a force of 18,000 soldiers and police guarding polls and potential trouble spots.

British Ballot Set

LONDON (UPI)—Conservative opposition leader Edward Heath launched the British general election campaign today with a promise to "build a better Britain" and a slogan stating, "under Labor you've never had it."

As the country awaited an expected announcement from Prime Minister Harold Wilson Monday that he is calling the election for June 18, Heath told a Conservative party conference at Perth, in Scotland, "We want to build a better Britain."

Pro-Nixon March

NEW YORK (UPI)—Up to 5,000 construction workers, longshoremen and white collar workers marched through New York City's financial district Friday in a noisy demonstration in which cheers for Nixon administration policies mingled with shouted insults against Mayor John V. Lindsay.

Only scattered incidents were reported as thousands of policemen eyed the throng in the area where some 500 construction workers assaulted antiwar protesters last Friday, sparking an investigation of "police failure" in controlling the mob. At least 70 were injured in the incident.

Regents Take Over

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — University of California regents have assumed sole authority for the decision of keeping or firing miniskirted black teacher Angela Davis, an avowed Communist.

The regents voted 15-6 to remove the decision from UCLA Chancellor Charles Young after he said he would keep her in her post as acting assistant professor of philosophy.

Regents adopted a resolution taking away the "authority and responsibility" of Young and UC President Charles Hitch to decide the fate of Miss Davis, 26.

The board indicated it will make a decision at its June 19 meeting in Los Angeles.

Toronado Toll 22

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI)—The death toll from a tornado that pounded eight miles through this west Texas city five days ago rose to 22 today. Mayor James H. Grandberry set aside Sunday as a day of prayer for both those who died and those who survived.

Joe Garrett, 29, died at 2:50 a.m. in Methodist Hospital of multiple injuries suffered in the twister that struck Lubbock Monday night.

Panther Probe

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal grand jury has rebuked law enforcement agencies involved in a fatal raid on Black Panther party members and its subsequent investigation.

No one was indicted.

The grand jury's 252-page report, issued Friday, says the work of the law officers involved "gives some reasonable basis for public doubt of their efficiency or even of their credibility."

Two Panther leaders, Fred Hampton and Mark Clark, were killed when Negro and white police from the state's attorney's office raided Hampton's apartment Dec. 4 in a search for illegal weapons.

The grand jury also was critical of seven Panther members who survived the raid for refusing to testify at its hearings. The report had harsh words for the Black Panther party.

Baby Is Lost

HOUSTON Tex, (AP) — A miscarriage has ended the hopes of a child for falsetto-voiced singer Tiny Tim and his Miss Vicki.

The couple, married in a nationally televised ceremony last Dec. 17, were expecting the child in September. They were in Houston for an appearance by Tiny Tim.

Miss Vicki, 18—it's Victoria May Khaury on her marriage license—was admitted to Methodist Hospital Friday morning with severe abdominal pains, and had a miscarriage about four hours later, the hospital said.

The child would have been a boy.

Private School Break

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Justice Department says granting income tax exemptions to all-white private schools springing up in the South is "an act of benevolent neutrality."

The government's decision not to challenge legality of the exemptions which are under attack by a group of black Mississippi school children and their parents appeared in a brief filed here Friday in U.S. District Court.

Boxer's Kin Elated With Chance At Beauty Title

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Miss New Jersey, black and beautiful, skipped over to the tufted, elaborate chair Miss USA will sit in tonight. "I'd better do this while I can," she said, jumping into it. "I'll never get another chance."

Ellen Cream, a niece of former world heavyweight boxing champion Jersey Joe Walcott, pulled her knees under her chin, tucked her miniskirt down, and said, "It's still hard being black, but more doors are opening these days. And by gosh, you can bet if a door opens, I'll cram my foot in it."

The 5-foot-7½, brown-eyed teletypist was the only Negro in the Miss New Jersey pageant finals. She says she is proud she won it, and doesn't worry too much about whether her color —and not her physical features and personality—won it for her.

"Just being here has been a victory for me. I'm already a winner, and I think I'm helping my race by being one of the 51 contestants here. I'm upholding my race, true, but just like all these white girls, I've got neighbors and friends back home on a local level who are proud of me."

She whipped out a greeting card from an invisible pocket, thrust it out and said, "See, this is from this nice old woman who lives in my block. She knows me, and I have made her proud and happy. She's black, and I'm black ... but so what? Emotions don't stop at color."

She laughed, wiped away huge tears and said, "I'm sorry, don't know where these came from It's just that I'm tired and elated and have all sorts of feelings running through me now that this week is almost over.

"I just want it to be over with so I can go home and be myself. I want to scrub all this makeup off, peel these false eyelashes off, and wear my blue jeans. My poor face is saying, 'What are you doing to me?"

Ellen, 21, said she hasn't run into any racial prejudice during the Miss USA pageant.

"None of the girls have talked to me about race--but one contestant said she wished she had my tan. Now what's that supposed to mean?"

Murphy Lists His Income, Holdings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sen. George Murphy says his financial assets have grown $9,000 in the five years he's served as a senator—giving him a net worth today of $334,723.

In a statement disclosed here and in Washington, the Republican lawmaker said he was revealing his finances as an "article of good faith" in his bid for reelection.

Among the sources of income listed by Murphy since he was elected in 1964 was $20,000 a year received as a consultant to Technicolor, Inc.

His opponents have criticized him for drawing the fee while serving in the Senate.

Other holdings Murphy listed included a $47,337 investment in a West Los Angeles shopping center, a house that cost $88,570 and stocks costing $26,031.

He said he held stocks in Technicolor, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Times Mirror Co., Admiral Industries, Admiral United Industries, Computer and Data Components, Nutt Sales Co., Spectrum Resources, Sun Coast Development Co., Creative Merchandising, Schick Investment Co. and World Cuisine Co.

His total 1969 income was $87,431, he said, which included his $40,147 Senate salary, $20,000 Technicolor fee and money from dividends, interest, rental property, lecture fees and the Screen Actors Guild retirement pension.

The senator said he also earned $4,000 as a Technicolor director in addition to his consultant's fee.

His 1968 taxes were given as $29,403.

As of March 31, Murphy said he had $90,676 in banks and saving associations and owned furnishings, cars and other personal items that cost $91,471.

Atlanta Riot Deaths Laid To Buckshot

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Buckshot fired into their backs killed the six Negro victims of racial rioting here, the head of the State Crime Laboratory in Atlanta says.

Dr. Larry Howard examined the dead men Friday and reported to the Richmond County coroner's office.

"All six of the men were killed by bullets in the back and all of the bullets recovered were double-ought buckshot." Dr. Irvine Phinizy, a coroner's physician, said in citing Howard's report.

Police officers often carry 12-gauge shotguns loaded with double-ought buckshot during riots.

Funerals were planned for the riot victims Sunday and Monday. Ralph Abernathy, head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was to arrive today to attend.

About 1,500 National Guardsmen remained on duty.

In another development Friday, two cellmates of Charles Oatman, whose death touched off the rioting last Monday, testified that two other young cellmates severely beat him.

Span Directors Favor Hiring East Bay Man

A committee of the Golden Gate Bridge District board endorsed yesterday appointment of an official of the Alameda-Contra Costa Transit District as manager of transit operations.

He is H. Donald White, assistant general manger for operations with A-C Transit in Oakland.

The unanimous endorsement by the joint transportation and finance-auditing committee came on the recommendation of Dale W. Luehring, bridge district general manager. If the selection is ratified by the full bridge board at its May 28 meeting, White would be paid $26,500 annually to administer the ferry and bus systems which the district plans to operate.

White, who lives in Orinda, held the post of superintendent of operations for Bartlett Transportation Co. in San Francisco before taking the A-C Transit job. He also formerly worked with Continental Trailways.

In other bridge matters yesterday, the finance-auditing committee learned staff had narrowed to three the long-range options for rapid transit between the North Bay and San Francisco. These are a bay rail tube from Fisherman's Wharf to Sausalito and connecting with the Northwestern Pacific Railroad right-of-way; a light-weight rail or air cushion right-of-way under the bridge span or bus rapid transit with an exclusive highway right-of-way from Novato into downtown San Francisco, with the city portion being underground. The latter would also include a Marin connection to BART in Richmond.

A public hearing on the options was set for 8 p.m. May 27 at the Marin Civic Center.

Ex-Teacher's Pot Trial Is Deadlocked

A Marin Superior Court jury failed yesterday to agree on whether a former Novato High School teacher was guilty of three marijuana charges, but did convict him of a lesser offense.

The jury of 10 women and two men, reporting itself deadlocked, voted 10-2 to convict James D. Kimmel, 34, on a charge of using minors to obtain marijuana for him and 8-4 for conviction on a charge of possessing pot and of using pot on the school campus.

The jury, however, did convict Kimmel of resisting a Novato policeman when he was arrested on campus on Nov. 15, 1968.

Judge E. Warren McGuire declared a mistrial on the marijuana charges and Deputy Dist. Atty. Jerry R. Herman and defense attorney Stephen Koolpe agreed that the case be continued to May 25 for setting of a new trial or dismissal and for setting of a sentencing date on the misdemeanor count.

Kimmel, who had taught science at the school for a little over a year before his arrest, was fired shortly after.

Now long-haired and bearded, he had testified during the trial that he had given $5 to two students to buy a lid of marijuana for him. He and the student agreed that no actual exchange had taken place.

He denied, however, that he smoked a pot cigarette the evening of his arrest. An officer testified he had found a partly smoked pot butt on the ground near where he said he had seen Kimmel smoking some kind of a cigarette.

During the trial, Kimmel said that students had left marijuana cigarettes for him in his desk drawer "because they liked the knowledge I was sharing with them."

Trash Pickups For Sausalito

Sausalito residents will receive a free trash pick-up in additional to regular garbage collection next week, according to H. Eric Borgwardt, acting city manager.

The debris collection, one of four free pickups offered during the year, will begin on Monday and will be on the same days and along the same routes as regular collections, Borgwardt said.

He said the pickup is limited to 30 cubic yards of debris from each household which should be tied in bundles or in containers placed at the curb. No rocks or concrete will be collected.

NEW CITIZEN

She Still Awaits First Voting Chance

Mrs. Edith Llona Clark of Larkspur had hoped to obtain her naturalization papers in time to vote in the June 2 primary, but she didn't make it.

As a new citizen — one of 17 Marin and Southern Sonoma residents naturalized in U. S. District Court in San Francisco last month — Mrs. Clark said she is endeared to her new voting right and awaits a chance to exercise it.

Last week she proudly presented her voting credentials at the county clerk's office. "I'm interested in politics and want to participate," she said.

She was told it was to late to register for the primary, but could thereafter.

Mrs. Clark, a native of Hungary, moved to the U.S. in 1962 after spending five years in Germany. She worked for two years as a civil draftsman for Bechtel Corp. in San Francisco, where she met her husband, Donald H. Clark, an electrical engineer.

The Clarks live at 63 Wilson Way with their son, Steven, 4. Mrs. Clark is also a part-time art student at the College of Marin.

Other Marin and Southern Sonoma residents naturalized were:

NOVATO — Mrs. Valerie Ellen Reed, 5410 Redwood Highway.

PETALUMA — Mrs. Masae Crossler, 917 St. Francis Drive; Mrs. Maria Pimentel Freitas and Manuel Freitas, both of 2886 Stoney Point Road, and Mrs. Ursula Wright, 1629 Eastside Way.

POINT REYES STATION — Richard Buch, Buena Vista.

TIBURON — Brian Marais, 24 Venus Court.

PRIVATE POLL

Marin Attorneys Weigh Muni Court Candidates

Jack L. Blaine and Howard K. Morehouse are regarded as the most highly qualified candidates for Marin Municipal Court judge by attorneys who responded to a poll conducted by a San Rafael legal firm.

Least qualified on the candidate list, in the opinions of fellow attorneys polled, are Harry E. Rice, Frank Solomon Jr., and Donald Rosenberg.

William G. Corrigan and Roderick P. Martinelli of the firm of Bagshaw, Martinelli, Corrigan and Jordan sent rating sheets on the 13 judge candidates (although one has since withdrawn from the race) to 163 attorneys practicing in Marin County. One hundred and two returned filled-out sheets (though some left the rating blank for one or more of the candidates). Three sent letters of refusal.

The ballots asked that the attorneys rate the judge candidates as not qualified, doubtful if qualified, qualified, highly qualified, exceptionally qualified, or "unable to rate."

Some of the candidates less well known in local practice received "unable to rate" from many of the attorneys, the highest in this category being Tom Thorner with 55. Only three felt themselves unable to rate Harold J. Truett and Ernest C. Zunino, and only four marked "unable to rate" for Morehouse and A. Leonard Bjorklund.

Of those who rated them, 85 per cent considered Blaine and Morehouse qualified. Percentage of those who rated other candidates finding them qualified were:

Bjorklund, 68 per cent; Truett, 67; Robert A. Smallman, 63; Zunino, 60; Thorner, 56; Charles R. Best, 50; Joshua W. Thomas, 47; Thomas T. Storer (who has dropped out of the contest), 32; Rosenberg, 16; Solomon, 9; Rice, 7.

Blaine received 14 votes as "exceptionally qualified," the highest number for any candidate. Following in votes as "exceptionally qualified" were Morehouse with 9, Smallman and Truett with 8 each, and Bjorklund with 6.

Results of the poll were as follows, with A meaning not qualified; B, doubtful if qualified; C, qualified; D, highly qualifed; E, exceptioally qualified, and F, unable to rate.

Best — A 12, B 19, C 21, D none, E 2, F 47.

Blaine — A 4, B 9, C 32, D 28, E 14, F 15.

Morehouse — A 14, B 12, C 35, D 27, E 9, F 4.

Rice — A 30, B 26, C 4, D none, E none, F 41.

Smallman — A 9, B 27, C 44, D 10, E 8, F 4.

Thorner — A 14, B 6, C 15, D 7, E 4, F 55.

Corrigan and Martinelli said they undertook the pool because many people are unacquainted with many of the judge candidates, and a rating by their fellow attorneys might prove helpful to voters. The poll results indicated that many attorneys also are unacquainted with some of the candidates.

No bail or court date was set for the five.

At about 6:30 a.m., three more suspects from a Fairfax residence were booked, also on suspicion of possessing marijuana for sale. Being held under $5,000 bail were David Bruce Tate, 23, of Oregon; Herbert Brian Berez, 32, of Los Angeles, and Douglas Edward Rambo, 29, of 18 Wood Lane, Fairfax.

No other details of the arrests were available.

Jets Battle Third Day In Mideast

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Israeli and Egyptian warplanes battled Saturday in the third consecutive day of aerial combat over the Suez Canal, and at least three jets were reported shot down—two Egyptian MIGs and one Israeli Mirage.

In ground action, a large Arab guerrilla force was reported battling Israeli troops in the Jordan Valley in fighting that broke out after Arab guerrillas attacked Israeli positions with rockets and ran up a Palestinian flag over an Israeli post.

A guerrilla spokesman said the Israelis rushed reinforcements to the Kasr El-Yahoud region and sent in warplanes to force the guerrillas to bring the flag down. He said the guerrillas also sent in reinforcements and a battle was still going on late Saturday.

In the action over the Suez Canal, a Tel Aviv spokesman said Israeli jets downed two Egyptian MIG jets, bringing to 10 the number of Arab aircraft shot down by the Israelis this week.

The Israeli warplanes jumped the MIGs as they streaked in on a low level attack against Israeli positions in the Southern sector of the Suez Canal, the spokesman said.

A Cairo military spokesman said Egyptian fighter pilots shot down one of Israel's French-made Mirage jets in the air action over the canal, and said all Egyptian planes returned to base safely. Israel also denied it lost any plane.

Four Marines Accused Of Viet Murders

DA NANG, Vietnam (UPI) — The U.S. Marine Corps Saturday ordered a court martial for four Marines accused of murdering 16 Vietnamese civilians last Feb. 19.

A fifth marine involved in the case was freed from confinement April 26 with charges held in abeyance, military sources said.

The 1st Marine Division also announced that 1st Lt. Louis R. Ambort, 23, of Little Rock, Ark., was given a letter of reprimand and sentenced to forfeiture of $500 pay for making a false official statement about the incident involving members of his company.

A preliminary investigation of the charges found sufficient evidence of a crime to try the four. Maj. Gen. Charles F. Widdecke, 1st Division commander, Saturday referred the men to trial.

The accused are Pvts. Randall D. Herrod, 20, Calvin, Okla.; and Michael A. Schwarz, 21, Weirton, W. Va.; Pfcs. Thomas R. Boyd, Jr., 19, Evansville, Ind.; and Samuel G. Green, 18, Cleveland, Ohio.

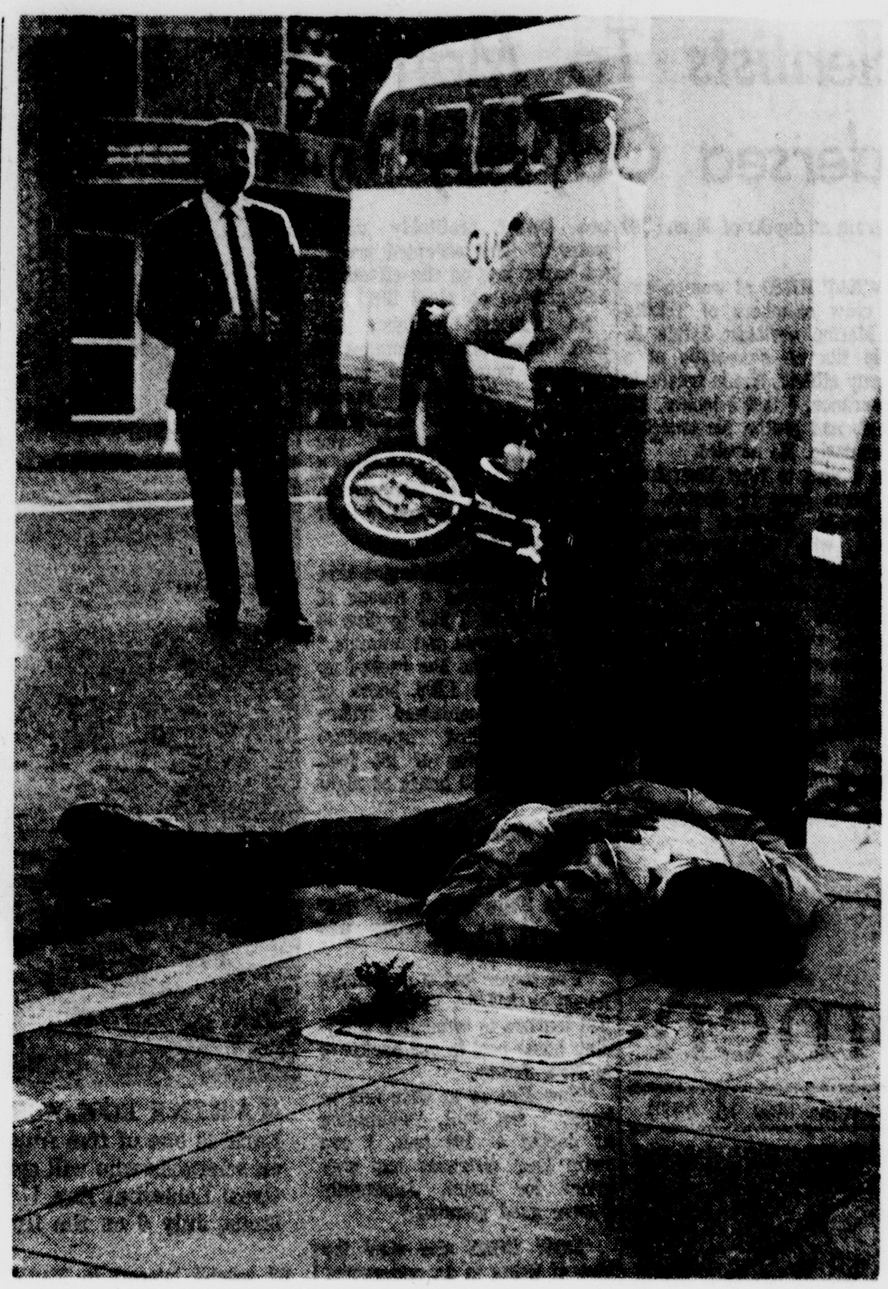
Trial dates have not been announced.

All five men were on a night ambush patrol and passed through Hamlet 4 of Song Thang village, 27 miles south of Da Nang, last Feb. 19. The next morning an old woman from the village reported to another passing Marine patrol that 16 civilians — five women and 11 children — had been shot to death. She showed the patrol where villagers had buried the bodies.

Ambort was punished for the false official statement "concerning the after action report on a patrol, made up of members of his company," Bravo Company 1st Battalion, 7th Marine Regiment.

The incident occured in the Communist infested Que Son valley. Most residents of Hamlet 4 were wives or relatives of Viet Cong, South Vietnamese district officials said.



MOTORCYCLE MISHAP

A young San Rafael motorcyclist lies on Fifth Avenue after skidding into a charter bus between B and C streets. The unidentified driver of the bus and a San Rafael policeman stood by today. The victim, John Edward Krummes, 22, of 101 B Street, apparently tried to avoid hitting the bus, which was turning into a driveway, police said, but lost control of his motorcycle. He was treated for bruises on his ribs and right shoulder at Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Rafael after the 7:18 a.m. accident.

Plants' Smokestacks Bring More Rain

By ELDON BARRETT

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI)— University of Washington researchers studying artificial rain-making and the mechanisms of cloud formations have discovered that some industrial plants are seeding clouds inadvertently thus causing increased precipitation.

This inadvertent weather modification is being created by smoke plumes from pulp and paper mills, sawmills with woodwaste burners and aluminum smelters, according to Dr. Peter V. Hobbs, associate professor of atmospheric sciences.

He said that although the obvious effects of air pollution have been under study for many years, the effects of air pollution on the weather have not been considered previously.

Hobbs explained that the research program was carried out by conducting airplane flights over several industrial plants in the Puget Sound area as part of a long-range study on cloud formation and artificial control of precipitation.

In the course of events, the study revealed that paper mills in Everett and Port Townsend emit one million trillion sulphate particles per second. These particles have a high affinity for water and act as centers around which cloud droplets are formed.

In other instances, the effluents from industrial sources were found to have an appreciable influence on the visible structure of clouds forming downwind from natural causes.

Hobbs said that in the areas immediately northeast of Everett and Port Townsend the average annual precipitation during the last 20 years has been more than 30 per cent higher than it had been during the preceding 20 years. He attributed this to the four-fold increase in operations of the mills in the Puget Sound area since World War 11.

The north fork of the Stillaguamish River, which is directly northeast of Everett and generally downwind from the large pulp plants of that city, had a most significant increase in runoff from 1947 to 1966. Other large increases in rainfall were recorded in the vicinity of Chimicum, near Port Townsend, and Victoria, B.C., which also has substantial mill operations.

Another phase of Hobbs' research involved a basic study to determine the feasibility of controlling the distribution of snowfall over the Cascade Mountains.

He and his team spent much of last winter flying into the teeth of storms over the Cascades in a specially-equipped airplane. Using cartridges mounted on racks under the wings, they seeded clouds with silver iodide, a freezing agent, to inhibit the growth of snowflakes as part of the objective to develop techniques to control the growth of ice crystals by artificial means.

Hobbs believes that if the snowflakes can be "harnessed" they can be targeted to fall on selected areas. In this way man could have some control over spring runoff or improvement of ski slopes.

Foreign Aid

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban says Israel plans to increase its extensive foreign aid program. The program provides training in Israel for about 1, 00 foreigners a year. About 500 Israeli experts are sent abroad each year. The foreign minister told newsmen that no country has ever refused an Israeli offer for aid due to pressure from the Arab states.

Right-Of-Way

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The pilot of the paddlewheel steamboat, "Belle of Louisville," Harris Underwood, says there always has been debate over who has the right-of-way on a river—a drawbridge or a steamboat.

Underwood says, "The drawbridge has—he can stay there."

U.S. forces lost two helicopters in the Fishhook Friday. One was shot down by a Communist rocket grenade and the second crashed because of a mechanical failure. Six American were killed and six injured.

Education Award To Marin Man

Richard L. Foster of Greenbrae, superintendent of Berkeley schools, has been presented the 10th annual Roy W. Cloud award of the University of San Francisco for distinguished achievement in public school administration.

Cloud was executive secretary of the California Teachers Association for many years.

Voice Expert's Advice: Practice

NEW YORK (AP) — Allen Swift, the man of a thousand voices, who has given personality to an endless stream of products for radio and television commercials, advises young people interested in a similar career to "practice, practice, practice."

The man who was heard as all the voices on the "Howdy Doody Show," as the herring Maven, Casper the friendly ghost and assorted other characters, including a blinking flashlight battery and the voice of a plumber's plunger, suggests a person interested in the field start by reading every billboard you pass on the road. "Pick up newspapers and read them aloud," he says. "Use a tape recorder and spend as much time practicing as you would if you were already in the business."

He suggests an amateur with no previous experience start by attempting to land a job at his local station. "Then you can hit the center in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles."

His final advice was to get the reaction of others to your work and always to compare the quality of your efforts with that of those who are tops in the field.

State Court Studies Bond Court Rule

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The California Supreme Court has taken under submission a legal war against the requirement for two-thirds approval of local bond issues.

San Francisco Mayor Joseph L. Alioto challenged constitutionality of the provision Friday, declaring it violates the one-man, one-vote principle. He urged a simple majority vote to adopt bond issues.

Tom O'Connor, San Francisco city attorney, conversely contended the state has the right to enact rules to assure fiscal responsibility.

O'Connor pointed out California voters in 1966 rejected a proposition to reduce the bond vote requirement to 60 per cent for schools.

Alioto presented his argument Friday as the Supreme Court took up consideration to eight cases seeking to overturn the two-thirds vote requirement for bond issues.

He appeared for his private law firm on behalf of a group contesting a defeat last year for schools in Hunters Point, a black community area.

The cases before the high tribunal include four from Los Angeles, two from San Francisco, one from Sacramento and one from Yuba City.

George W. Wakefield, Los Angeles attorney representing school bond supporters, said California is only one of six states still requiring a two-thirds vote for approving bond issues.

Anti-U.S. March Flares In Tokyo

TOKYO (UPI) — An estimated 1,400 demonstrators, including Japanese housewives and children and some Americans living in Tokyo, demonstrated in front of the U.S. Embassy Saturday in protest against U.S. entry into Cambodia.

The demonstrators massed at Tokyo's Shimitzutani park and then marched to the embassy, shouting "No more Vietnam," and "Nixon wake up."

Six persons were arrested in a brief swirmish between Japanese demonstrators and police after an American buddhist resident in Japan, Brian A. Victoria, broke away from the group apparently to hand a letter of protest to U.S. embassy officials.

"We beg friendly countries to give concrete support to resist the assaults of the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese," he said.

Despite the appeal, no Asian nation, except South Vietnam, whose troops are already in Cambodia, appeared ready to respond. The Philippines and New Zealand have made clear they disfavor arms aid to Cambodia. Japan said it was willing to extend humanitarian assistance.

Strong Temblor Jolts Russians

MOSCOW (AP) — A strong earthquake hit the Soviet autonomous republic of Dagestan in the North Caucasus mountains Thursday, Tass reported today.

The news agency gave no figures on casualties or damage but said "medical workers have been sent to all the populated areas that suffered from the earthquake and other necessary measures are being taken."

The quake had a seismic force of 8 on the 12-point Russian scale at its epicenter northwest of Makhachkala, the capital of Dagestan, Tass reported. This is equivalent to a force of 6.6 on the 10-point Richter scale.

Peat Bog Yields Ancient Relics

MELBORNE (AP)—Australia's oldest known aboriginal relics are being found in a peat-moss bog near Millicent on the Victoria-South Australia border.

Already four boomerangs, a few short pieces of spears and of spear throwers have been dug up by brothers Jim and John Van Schaik, operators of a peat-moss mining business.

The curator of anthropology at the Adelaide Museum, Robert Edwards, said the peat bog was a major archaeological discovery, and had the same preserving properties as bogs in Europe.

Jim Van Schaik said that the boomerang was found some months ago, but when the peat was cut away, the boomerang "shrivelled up."

GREEN SLIME GETS WORSE EACH YEAR

The green slime noticed by motorists in Richardson Bay is caused by a buildup of algae enhanced by hot spring weather and the discharge of treated sewage and detergents into the bay, a marine biologists said yesterday.

G. B. Talbot, director of the Tiburon Marine Laboratory, said the plant growth is "more than usual because it's getting worse each year." But he said the weather and sewage and phosphates in detergents, acting like fertilizer, generate the algae faster than usual.

No danger to wildlife is posed at present, he said, although a string of cloudless days could cause the algae to begin consuming oxygen instead of manufacturing it, threatening fish.

Cambodia Vets Shot Into By Angered Soldier

TAY NINH, Vietnam (AP) — An angry U.S. Army soldier fired into a crowd of GIs just back from Cambodia tonight, killing two and wounding 16, military police reported.

Investigators said they were holding one man in custody and looking for another.

The victims were members of a company that had just returned from Cambodia to rest after suffering more than 50 casualties in action.

They were seated in an outdoor bleacher waiting for a show to begin when several GIs from other units sat down to watch. Some members of the unit that had just returned objected to the presence of men from outside the company. A scuffle followed and the uninvited troops left.

Minutes later a soldier returned with an M16 rifle and opened fire on the men watching the show, investigators said.

Three Drivers Ordered Fined

Three persons have been sentenced in Marin Municipal Court for drunken driving. Each was placed on probation for one year by Judge Peter Allen Smith.

William James Larkin, 37, of San Francisco, arrested Dec. 10 on Highway 101, was also fined $250.

James Webb, 56, of 991 Drake Avenue, Marin City, arrested Nov. 15 on Highway 101, was fined $100.

Permit Sought For Auto Court

Marie Beinhouse of Mill Valley will ask for a use permit for a 92-unit auto court in Tamalpais Valley at a hearing before Deputy County Zoning Administrator Ralph D. Cairns at 11 a.m. Monday at the Civic Center.

The 52,000-square-foot property bounded by Shoreline Highway, Pinehill Road, Springside and Sunset Way.

Carins will also consider a request to operate a nursery school in Novato at Novato Boulevard and Eucalyptus Avenue.

OBITUARIES

Gen. Dillard Memorial Rites Set

Memorial service for Maj. Gen. John A. B. Dillard of Corte Madera, killed Tuesday in Vietnam, will be held at the Presidio of San Francisco chapel at 1 p.m. Monday.

Dillard, who had been serving as commander of the Army Engineer Command in Vietnam, was killed when his helicopter was shot down by enemy gunners.

He was a leader in the field of water resources throughout California as well as in the Colorado River basin states and the great basin of Nevada and Utah.

Contributions in Dillard memory may be made to the Cadar's Development Foundation of Marin, Bolinas Avenue and Upper Road, Ross 94957, or to the National Foundation for Retarded Children, Inc., 1842 El Camino Real, Burlingame 94010.

MURIEL INGERSOLL

Muriel N. Ingersoll of Mill Valley, a lifelong resident of Marin County, died yesterday in a local hospital after a short illness. She was 69.

Miss Ingersoll, of 558 Miller Avenue, was a retired office clerk. She was born in Sausalito.

She is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Estelle DePue of Berkeley and Mrs. Hilda G. Grandi of Fairfax.

Funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Monday at the Episcopal Church of our Saviour in Mill Valley. Burial will be in the Mount Tamalpais Cemetery, San Rafael.

PHILIP LYGREN

Funeral for Philip B. Lygren, Ross town engineer, will be held Monday at 2 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church in San Rafael.

Lygren, 40, of San Rafael, died yesterday at a San Francisco hospital following a long illness.

Friends may call at Keaton's Mortuary in San Rafael to noon Monday. Burial will be private.

The family requests contributions be made to the American Cancer Society, the Heart Fund, Boy Scouts of America or Clear Walter Ranch, 607 College Avenue, Santa Rosa.

ROSE POOL

Rose B. Pool, who lived for 15 years in Marin County before moving to Sonoma in 1964, died Thursday in a Sonoma hospital after a long illness. She was 71.

Mrs. Pool, whose son, Robert R. Pool, lives in San Anselmo, lived in Greenbrae from 1949 to 1964. She was a native San Franciscan.

Mrs. Pool was a member of the Episcopal Church in Ross.

In addition to her son, Robert, she is survived by another son, Raymond J. Pool of Sonoma; two daughters, Leanore B. Holt of Auburn and Jane A. Workman of Sepulveda; a brother, Oliver F. Quillinan of San Francisco, and seven grandchildren.

Funeral will be held Monday at 10 a.m. at Trinity Episcopal Church in Sonoma. Burial will be in Holy Cross Cemetery in Colma.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Can You Imagine The Shape Bra-Less Women Will Be In?

DEAR HELEN:

I agree women need equal rights on some issues, but they need support on certain tissues. Those "ban the bra" dames are carrying feminine liberation too far.

Can you imagine the shape women will be in if this catches on? They should study their copies of National Geographic. Dig the middle-aged African belles: their chests are level with their navels. Pretty soon "libs" won't know whether to buckle their belts above or below.

Is bra-less really catching on? — BRA-ED

DEAR B:

Only with topless — and a few of the super s h a p e l y, or the "lib" kids. I understand lingerie makers aren't really suffering.

As one gal said, "I found going bra-less is uncomfortable. Besides, I nearly froze, and my blouses looked as though I'd displaced something." — H.

DEAR HELEN:

You sure missed the boat in your a n s w e r to "Suspicious Nell" who found a picture of her best girl friend in her husband's wallet. You actually believed her husband's version that it was just a joke.

Nell should have sent the picture to the girl's husband with a note saying, "I think this would look better in your wallet than in my husband's!" Then everyone could have been in on the little joke.

I'll bet the guilty couple really gloated over your stupid answer. — KNOWS MEN

DEAR KNOWS:

The men you know are evidently a different breed of cat from most of the men I know — and that makes all the difference. We tend to judge other people for bad or good by the kind of deal life has handed us.

My IGAP (I'm G u e s s i n g A g a i n Perception) says you drew a lemon for a husband. Am I right? — H.

DEAR HELEN:

For over a year now I've been bothered by two letters you printed in your column. One was from a girl in love with a guy who went to Vietnam. They made plans to marry. He wrote her every day. Then he was wounded and sent home, and his letter from the hospital broke it all off for no reason.

The other letter was from a wounded soldier who said he wouldn't tie the girl he loved down to marriage with a partial cripple, so he told her to forget him, giving no reason.

You ran the letters consecutively, pointing out that people should always level with each other. I'm a sucker for happy endings. Did you ever learn whether these two were actually engaged, or was it just one of those strange unexplained coincidences? — DYING TO KNOW

DEAR D.T.K.:

I've never heard and I often wonder, for I too am a sucker for happy endings. One of the big frustrations about columning is that so often people only write when they're troubled, and they seldom let me know how things turned out — until the next problem hits. Then they write, "Your advice last year really worked" (no hint as to what advice) "so now I'm trying you again . . ." — H.

This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble or just plain trouble, let Helen help you. Address Helen Bottel in care of the Independent-Journal.

Women Scientists To Man 14-Day Undersea Odyssey

By PHYLLIS BERNSTEIN

NEW YORK (UPI)—On July 6 five American women scientists will splashdown at Great Lameshur Bay, U.S. Virgin Islands, the first step of a 14-day odyssey into the world of inner space.

On July 20 they will surface after having lived in total isolation on the floor of the sea. Their mission: marine research performed under conditions of unusual stress.

These pioneers are one group in the current Tektite II program, the nation's most ambitious manned undersea effort yet attempted. Sixty-two scientist aquanauts, engineers and doctors will participate in the seven-month, 17-mission program at depths of 50 and 100 feet.

WHAT KIND of women are the crew members of Tektite II? Marine ecologist Sylvia A. Earle fits no stereotype of a brawny athlete. She is fragile in appearance, 5 foot 3 inches, 110 pounds and pretty. No muscles. No rhetoric. No heroics.

On a visit to New York from her home base in Boston, the 34-year-old Harvard research fellow, wife and mother of three children, Elizabeth, 9, Richie, 8, and Gale, 2, spoke about the upcoming mission and how she came to compete in a once sacrosanct male field.

"They wanted scientists on the project," she said. "No mention of sex was made at all. I was asked to submit a proposal on 'how you can use two weeks profitably under water.'" (Her accepted proposal paper was on the effects of fish grazing on plant life.)

No militant feminist, she feels "there are advantages to being a woman in a man's situation. Sometimes you're g i v e n deferential treatment which you don't deserve," she said. "After you maintain a certain degree of competence, people (men) do go out of their way to help."

SYLVIA EARLE began skin diving solely "as a means of transportation. I had to dive to get to the plants and animals."

Since then she has racked up an impressive 1,000 hours of SCUBA (self-contained underwater breathing apparatus) diving at depths of 150 feet. This includes 50 hours of night diving.

It all began in 1953 "when I was thrown over with a tank while I was a student at Florida State University." Her major at the university was marine biology.

"I've never had a swimming lesson or SCUBA instruction; I just learned to swim in a rinky-dink home pool in our backyard in New Jersey.

"Now I'm so at ease and so happy," she said, "swimming at depths of 100 feet. I can swim long distances and stay afloat for hours. Apparently I have good stamina."

HOW DOES she view the idea of living in an underwater habitat with four strangers, being continuously observed by closed circuit television and each morning leaving the security of the base home to work some eight hours in the sea?

"I view it with no trepidation whatsoever," she said. "I figure Tektite II to be a very safe operation. I'll take sharks any time to driving down a Boston street. Now Harvard Square," she joshed, "that scares me."

The self-sustaining, four-chambered habitat is complete with living quarters for five people. It contains all necessary furniture, including television, plumbing and support equipment.

The housing consists of two 18-foot high steel cylinders connected by a transfer tunnel. Each of the cylinders has two compartments, the left side housing crew quarters on the lower deck with the control room above. On the upper half of the right cylinder lies the engine room, directly above a wet room which is continuously left open to the sea for easy access in entering and leaving the habitat. The wet room stores SCUBA gear and contains a hot shower.

EACH MISSION will be stocked with a two-week supply of food. On several missions National Aeronautics and Space Administration food will be used as part of a test program for palatability.

Of special interest to NASA (one of the agencies playing a major role in the program, which is a cooperative effort involving government and private industry) are the ways in which the five women will form social and work groups. Their responses and interrelations will be studied for applications to the selection of future astronaut crews.

Ann Hartline, 23, of the Scripps Institute of Oceanography, San Diego, Calif., Dr. Renate Schlenz True, 33, Tulane Medical School, New Orleans, and Alina Szmant, 23, Scripps Institute of Oceanography, are the other scientists scheduled for the mission. Engineer Margaret Ann Lucas, 22, University of Delaware, Newark, Del., is the fifth member.

A primary goal of the mission is the behavioral study of man under stress, his performance capability while accomplishing a real mission over long duration in a hazardous environment.

ACCORDING TO S y l v i a Earle, emotions belongs topside. She has had various problems underwater and admits that "at 100 feet it can get a l i t t l e spooky." Her advice is "don't panic."

"One time I simply ran out of air," she recalls. "I didn't fiddle around dropping my weights but just quickly swam to the surface. I felt alarm, but I wasn't out of control."

Asked about sharks, she said, "panic again is the b i g problem. Even in a good situation, if you panic...." Sharks have circled her in the Indian Ocean at distances as close as three feet, but she says, "There was no alarm. No, 'wow, look at that shark.' I always figure if they go their way, I'll go mine."

This sanguine statement on sharks does not seem extraordinary coming from a woman who, when five months pregnant, was in a lockout submarine swimming at a depth of 100 feet off the coast of Florida. "My doctor on the mission site said there were no problems (due to her pregnancy)," she recalls, "and I felt so comfortable."

THE TALK turned to that inevitable 1970 question. What about woman power and women's rights?

Sylvia Earle admitted, "I've been aware sometimes that men have been selected not solely on the basis of competence. This doesn't bother me. I just shrug my shoulders and go on.

"As for the Women's Liberation Movement, I view it with an equanimity that approaches indifference," she said. "It's fine, if that's their area of competence (protest and waving a flag). Well, that isn't my thing. In life," she added, "you get on with it."

Come July, scientists, ecologists, divers and most assuredly women will be watching Sylvia Earle and her fellow explorers "get on with it," as they silently glide down into the quiet sapphire blue waters of Beehive Cove. Right on, Ladies!

MR. AND MRS. KENNETH M. WIGHMAN II

Kenneth M. Wightman Weds In Oregon Rite

On a wedding trip to Canada are newlywed Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth McTavish Wightman II (Patricia Ann Stafford), who exchanged marriage vows May 9 in a ceremony at St. Alice's Catholic Church in Springfield, Ore.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Stafford of Eugene, Ore., and Kenneth is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth M. Wightman of Petaluma.

Mrs. Michael Rowe of Eugene was matron of honor at the ceremony, Linda Kay Collins of Pleasant Hill was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Mrs. Gary Neal of Eugene, Mrs. Dennis Gaibler of Corvallis and Jo Anne Keith of Corvallis.

Gary Neal of Eugene was the best man and ushers were Kenneth Stafford, the bride's brother; Gary Abelbide, Don O'Meara and Steven Ebmeyer.

The reception was held afterward at the Eugene Elks Club.

The bride was graduated from Oregon State University and is attending graduate school there. Her husband also was graduated from OSU and is a land surveyor and engineer for Timberland Services, Inc. in Albany, Ore., where the couple will live. Kenneth is the brother of Mrs. Russ Ryder of San Jose and the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Hopkins of Petaluma.

PRESS GUIDE IS AVAILABLE

A new guide for press chairmen o f organizations which are interested in getting news to the Marin Women's Section of the Independent-Journal is now available at the San Rafael main office and the Novato, Mill Valley and Southern Sonoma I-J offices.

The booklet, "Getting News Into Your Newspaper," is issued as a service of the Independent-Journal Women's Section to assist p r e s s chairmen for w o m e n ' s organizations.

The booklets at the San Rafael office may be obtained from the switchboard on the main floor.

Buy Toys After Observing Skills

Don't just buy your preschooler any toy that catches your fancy — or his. Watch your youngster at play, learn his interests. Observe the skills he e n j o y s exercising and those which should be challenged and developed. Then make your toy purchases.

Preschoolers learn while playing and toys are the tools of a child's work and play. That's why it's important to give careful consideration to toy purchases.

A Trousseau To Last Years

NEW YORK (UPI — The trousseau can serve the bride for several years, if it is well planned.

It should consist of daytime clothes, dinner, cocktail or evening clothes, at home clothes, sports clothes, loungewear, lingerie and outfits to wear for errands or housekeeping duties.

A good idea: shop for different clothes at different times. For example, spend a day shopping for lingerie, then work outward.

A fairly basic wardrobe plan includes:

—Two suits, one casual, one dressy; six daytime dresses — three winter, three summer.

—Four party or evening out dresses — two winter and two summer; one at-home costume.

—Two sweaters, two pairs of pants or shorts, four blouses or shirts, two skirts.

—One peignoir, one bathrobe, five bras, five slips, seven panties, two girdles.

—Six nightgowns or pajamas.

—Three handbags—one winter, one summer, one evening.

Cover Horizontal Wall With Mural

A complete mural can cover from seven to 16 feet of horizontal wall space. The size of your room and the unbroken wall areas will help you d e c i d e whether you have space for an entire mural, several panels of mural, or a panel design.

In planning a mural it is wise to make a rough sketch of all four walls, laid out flat, with measurement indicated.

Mmes. Richard Hawkins, Martin Dean and William Murphy are reservations chairmen.

Cook Yogart At Low Temperature

When you cook your yogurt, remember to spare the heat. The Dairy Council of Metropolitan New York suggests keeping to low temperatures and short heating times to prevent separation. Separation doesn't hurt the flavor but it may spoil the appearance of your dish. Another trick to prevent separation: add a small amount of flour or cornstarch. Don't stir—just fold yogurt into other ingredients and it will keep its consistency.

When you bake with yogurt, you may need to modify your recipe slightly by using ½ teaspoon of baking soda for each cup of yogurt.

Island Kitchens

Island arrangements are popular in today's kitchens. A large room is necessary because there should be four feet between each side of an island and the opposite cabinets, appliances or wall. For example, a 36-inch wide island in a U-shaped kitchen requires a room 15 feet wide.

Fireproof Cloth

A new fabric from the textile world is a fireproof cloth named Durette. The cloth will not lose its strength or give off noxious fumes when exposed to flames or intense heat, its makers claim. The material, with its nylon-like feel and drape, is expected to have many home decorating applications.

SEW SIMPLE

Adjusting A Bridal Gown

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I am planning to be married this fall and would like to make my own wedding gown. Most of the patterns I see in the books have an empire line which isn't too becoming to my figure. Is there any way I can adjust the pattern so that the waistline will be at the normal position?

MISS P.R.

DEAR MISS P.R.,

This is probably the simplest of all pattern adjustments. Simply measure your pattern from the shoulder seam to the seamline above the waist and compare it to your own measurements. Tie a string tightly around your waist before taking your own measurements and add one-half to 1 inch for ease.

If the bodice is too long-waisted when you try it on, you can always shorten it at that time. Since you will be working with fabrics that show every mark when anything is ripped out, be sure to make a sample bodice for your first fitting.

More and more girls are making their wedding gowns today. It is a beautiful way to begin a marriage. Don't forget that with all the last-minute running around to get everything done before the wedding, most girls lose a little weight. Put off the last fitting at the side seams until the last minute.

MRS. LAWRENCE W. Hudson, Charlotte, N. C., is this week's winner of the Tailor Trix pressing board for her sewing hint:

"I was going through several big boxes of scraps the other day to send to my daughter for making a quilt and was really astonished at the number of garments I had made since she was a baby; she added quite a few too. I suggested to her that she keep a log — description of the garment, pattern number, date started, date completed and a scrap of the material. It's never too late to start. How nice to have a quilt with all these bits of family history, each scrap brings back happy memories.

DEAR EUNICE,

With all the different fabrics on the market today, some hand washable, some machine washable, some only dry cleanable; keep a permanent file of everything you buy for future reference. You think you'll remember, but when it comes time to make a decision, you'll probably do the wrong thing.

This reference could be kept in a little note book never to be removed from the drawer of your sewing machine, with a scrap of the fabric as soon as you make your purchase and any cleaning or washing instructions written in. Another method I have used for this is to keep a little package of marking tape and pen in the sewing machine. Write the instructions on this tape and sew it in the seam of your dress.

You will save many disasters if you take an extra minute before starting to make a dress.

MRS. M.T.

DEAR EUNICE,

Are we going to be forced back to the underarm zipper closing for our dresses now that the waistline has returned? My dresses fit so much closer to the body now that I find I can't possibly pull up the zipper myself and the invisible zipper is impossible.

MRS. M. B.

DEAR MRS. M. B.:

I was wondering how long it was going to be before someone wrote me about this. I have found this out myself, the hard way, when no one was around to help.

You can buy a zipper pull or use a small safety pin and attach it to a long ribbon or piece of string and it will work a little better, but with long, tight sleeves on top of a fitted bodice, once again you are at someone's mercy for help. The invisible zipper doesn't have a hole in the tab so it is virtually impossible to pull that kind up yourself.

I sure hate to think of going back to that head-squeezing neck type closing that pulled your hair off your head. Any suggestions from readers who have worked out a solution would be most gratefully welcome.

DEAR EUNICE,

I am rather tall and my measurements are between a size 14 and a size 16 pattern, in fact a size 15 fits me perfectly except for the length of the bodice. There are so few size 15 patterns that I am wondering how to get the proper fit from a size 14.

MRS. H. M.

DEAR MRS. H. M.:

You have some pattern adjustments to make just like most women who sew. Once you have worked them out, you will find it is easy to change most patterns and come out with the right measurements.

You have already told me that even though the size 15 fits you perfectly, you did have to lengthen the bodice. I would suggest that you compare the size 15 with the 14 pattern by placing the basic pieces of the pattern over each other; the larger size should be on the bottom. As an example, take the two bodice fronts, line them up so that the center fronts are over each other and the shoulder seams line up at one point. Now it is simple to check the width of the shoulder, armhole and side seams.

Cut according to the size pattern, that fits you. After you have done this a few times it will become routine and you may not have to check each piece of your pattern but you will automatically know where to add to the pattern and how much.

Very few women can cut a pattern exactly as it is and have it fit perfectly which is true about ready-to-wear. Once you are aware of the way a garment should fit, you will find that most of the clothes you bought and thought fitted perfectly, didn't fit every part of your body at all.

Learn what adjustments to make on a pattern to fit your figure and you will be able to change patterns easily. How to make these fitting ajujustments is explained inthe booklet, "Your Pattern and You" which you may have by sending 25 cents and a long, stamped, self - addressed envelope to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent - Journal.

Holy Ghost Fete Set In Sausalito

Pentecost Sunday will be celebrated in Sausalito tomorrow with the crowning of two queens selected by members of the IDEEST Lodge, the Portuguese Brotherhood of the Holy Ghost and Holy Trinity.

According to Manuel Silva, IDESST president and chairman for the event, a parade will leave the Sausalito IDESST Hall, 511 Caledonia Street, at 9:30 a.m. and proceed to Star of the Sea Catholic Church, where a High Mass will be celebrated by Rev. John Heaney, dean of men at Marin Catholic High School, at 10:30.

Father Heaney will crown the queens for the annual Holy Ghost festival. Silva said this year's "Big Queen" is Mary Pacheco, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Pacheco of Petaluma. Little Queen is Janice Machado, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Machado of San Anselmo.

Miss Pacheco's attendants will be Kathy Bettencourt of San Jose and Lorraine Pimentel of Cotati and Miss Machado will be attended by her sisters, Judy and Kathy Lopes of Muir Beach.

Carrying the capes of the queens will be the following youngsters: Mary Grace Silviera, Diane Mendez, Joe Silviera, George Bussman, Cynthia Pacheco, Janette Machado and Elizabeth Elgart.

Following the Mass the parade will proceed down to Bridgeway and through the city's downtown area, returning to the hall where a traditional Portuguese luncheon will be served around noon, Silva said.

Lodge members from throughout the Bay Area will participate in the parade, as will Sausalito city officials.

Dancing and dinner will follow the luncheon, Silva said.

INFLATION HITS SOUP

Barbara Pallenberg stands beside a can of vegetable beef soup that sold for $60,000. Actually, it's only a painting of a soup can by Andy Warhol. A European dealer who wished to remain anonymous purchased the 1962 painting at an auction yesterday at Parke-Bernet Galleries in New York. The second largest price was for a painting by Willem de Kooning called "Two Family Women" which brought $45,000. (UPI Telephoto)

Sister Files Family Suit Over Estate

A 42 - year - old Belvedere woman charged in a petition filed yesterday in Marin Superior Court that her brother is trying to gain control of her estate because he couldn't "tolerate her association with and marriage to a black man."

Furthermore, Kathryn Jean Lohman Smith said that she is mentally competent to manage her own affairs and she also denied that she is addicted to drugs.

The legal fuss started in Rebruary when Mrs. Smith's brother, Edward Beverly Lohman, a Standard Oil Co. executive who lives in Piedmont, filed a petition asking that he be named conservator of the $200,000 estate.

His action charged that "by means of drugs and other causes she has been induced by one Moses Smith (her present husband) to purchase three parcels of property and to have the titles placed in his name."

In her petition asking that the temporary conservatorship be terminated, Mrs. Smith charged that her brother was trying to gain control of her personal affairs.

She said that her relationship with Smith, whom she married in February, "has been and is one of sincere understanding, affection and love, which has culminated in marriage."

At stake are the Belvedere residence at 8 Buckeye Road, where Mr. and Mrs. Smith now live, as well as property in Berkeley and Olema.

A hearing on Mrs. Smith's request has been set for May 26.

Alto School Winners

Students of a combined second and third grade class at Alto School were winners of a special award in the "Let's Look at Mill Valley" contest, not students at Old Mill School as reported May 6 in the Independent-Journal.

Property Assessments Up, Broemmel Warns

Property assessments will rise next fiscal year by about 7.4 per cent countywide, Assessor Bert W. Broemmel announced yesterday.

More than half of the property owners in the county will get notices of assessment raises for 1970-71. "Some of the raises are modest, but areas like Sausalito and the south Tiburon Peninsula will have substantial increases," the assessor reported.

About 33,000 letters were mailed to property owners this week, and another 6,000 will be sent out during the week of May 25. "If you do not receive notices, your assessed values will not be changed for 1970-71," said Broemmel.

If a property owner feels the assessment raise is excessive, he may consult with the assessor to see the basis for the valuation then has the option of filing an appeal with the county assessment appeals board.

Appeals must be filed between July 2 and Aug. 26.

The raise in assessments in various cities range from a high of 20.2 per cent in Sausalito to a low of 1.9 in Fairfax. The raise in the unincorporated areas will be 3.9 per cent.

Belvedere 20.1, Corte Madera 4.5, Fairfax 1.9, Larkspur 11, Mill Valley 2.7, Novato 10.6, Ross 12.1, San Anselmo 13.4, San Rafael 6.8, Sausalito 20.2, and Tiburon 9.9.

In school districts, the rise in assessed values ranges from less than 1 per cent in the Lagunitas School District to 17.9 per cent in the Sausalito School District. Only one school district, Laguna Joint, will have a drop in assessed value — 4.8 per cent — because many ranchers in the area signed agricultural preserve agreements.

Mary Donnelly Not Meadow Club Member

A story of the meeting of the Marin Municipal Water District board in Thursday's Independent-Journal erroneously reported that Mary C. Donnelly of San Anselmo was vice president of the Marin Conservation League and a member of the Meadow Club.

Mrs. Donnelly is president of the league and discontinued her membership in the club about 10 years ago.

1,000 Entrants For Kentfield Festival

The Kentfield Community Spring Festival of the Arts tomorrow will feature the works of more than 1,000 persons according to chairman Robert A. Geurts.

Geurts said he is expecting more than 4,000 people during the festival hours, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., at the Adaline E. Kent School. There will be dance and chorus performances, plays, orchestra and quartet performances, short storites, poems, paintings, photographs, and other art forms contributed by Kentfield children and adults.

STAGE REVIEW

'Better Mousetrap' Springs Slowly But Does A Good Job

By GARY TISCHLER

I've always been a little bit crazy about Kammenberg cheese, and with strawberries on the side, it looked indescribably delicious.

It was part of a rather exotic menu last night at the San Anselmo Festival Theater's opening of its new revue "Better Mouse Trap." The menu, and the serving of same, proved to be one of the major hurdles on opening night, dragging the proceedings on to near midnight.

That may sound like quibbling right off the bat, and I'm sure its a fault that will be corrected, and it certainly wasn't the only fault. There was a certain pushy earnestness about the whole thing, a bid to turn this into a community encounter group that didn't always settle well or comfortably. Some of the skits didn't come off and none of it quite hit you with the lightning of revelation, even though a mantle of importance seemed to hang over the revue.

. . . but. Go see it, anyway. Because in the long run, the very faults of the revue work for it.

It is not polished and slick like some springtime commercial. And the earnestness at least is sincere.

And Elizabeth Berryhill has once again assembled a group of fairly talented young and young in spirit performers, headed by the undaunted Marjorie Casebier, the impish lady with the very expressive face.

More important, it seems to me to be an attempt by adults, through comedy, song, poetry, words and pictures, to convey what it is like to live in this age and in particular this country which is rapidly turning into a chaotic cauldron, a heady, suffocating witches' brew that has no room for the wisdom of children.

The opening opus "Right Lane, Left Lane, Straight Up" a series of projected slide images coupled to corss-barn dialogues of dos and don'ts, is the tip-off and the rest of the evening is spent in separating the age's confusions into different parts.

Some of the standout performers include Tim Sqyer, a young man with very driving energy and vital voice; Ann Kirschner, a young girl talented both in singing and in playing the guitar, and Skip Sommer, who has a muted, funny bit as the indecisive, relevant man. Miss Casebier has a hilarious thing as a college prexy delivering a total freedom welcome address to future charges.

The whole revue, in fact, attacks every form of repression, all the things and blankets that stifle our ability to see. This isn't the Mime Troupe or shrill underground bleatings. No naughties, no terrifying chants to awaken the middle-class bogeyman.

Perhaps I'm making too much of it, but I don't thing so.

There is one "skit," a thing with a magic man and a beam of light that may grant wishes. It is "passed out" to members of the audience. Surprisingly, there is some hesitant and even forceful response and it may be wishful thinking but I think I detected a certain amount of disappointment when the beam, like a lot of unnurtured dreams, was taken away.

Some more pluses that might be added on include the selection of songs, a good many of which were written by Marinites Betsy Chapman and John Stewart. Particularly moving is young Denise Arrell's rendition of "Wednesday's Child" and Miss Kirschner's singing of "Jamie." Sawyer also scores with "Garbage" while the deep voice of Dick Lewis comes through with "Lord of the Dance," a quite different concept of Jesus, and Jerry Perkins scores with "Friend of Jesus."

In the long run, and it is long, it's a very together kind of evening, even if it does get there in a roundabout way.

Mobile Home Hookup Set At $100 Fee

A $100 connection charge for mobile homes has been approved by the Las Gallinas Valley Sanitary District board.

The directors set the fee Thursday after hearing a report that the Marin Valley Mobile Country Club, under construction near Hamilton Air Force Base, would be ready to connect to the district by June 1, according to secretary Lelia C. Sayers.

Because of the large size of mobile units, Mrs. Sayers explained, they will be charged the same rate as a residential unit.

The board also approved annual line cleaning throughout a third of the district in Marinwood and Terra Linda to be done during the next four weeks and approved the placing of two new force mains in the treatment plant at 300 Smith Ranch Road. Bids for this project will be opened on June 11, Mrs. Sayers said.

The meeting was adjourned until May 27 at 7:30 p.m. at 300 Smith Ranch Road.

Bench Warrant Set In Canadian's Case

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A bench warrant has been issued in U.S. District Court for a Canadian man who failed to appear for sentencing as the result of discovery last June of $10,000 worth of LSD near a Tamalpais Valley house in which he lived.

The man, Robert Anthony Watt, has pleaded guilty to a charge of possessing LSD but failed to appear for judgment Wednesday before Judge Gerald S. Levin. The judge, besides issuing the warrant, raised bail from $500 to $5,000.

Inverness

★ONE OF A KIND★
Would you like one of the most beautiful and dramatic sites in California with a home especially designed for this magnificent site? At the very top of the Inverness ridge, adjoining the national seashore, and looking down at the beach and the Pacific ocean. The park like setting is absolutely breathtaking, and is probably one of the most beautiful sites in all of the Pt. Reyes peninsula. The home itself features 2 stone fireplaces, 2 baths, extra large living room, a study, and an all purpose room with a large adjoining deck. Large elevations of glass, combined with natural wood and stone, complete this magnificent setting. Don't miss the opportunity of seeing this very rare and one of a kind property. $69,500.

Fairfax Fills Last Seat On Planners

The Fairfax City Council got its planning commission back to full strength last night with a 3-2 vote approving Mayor Frank J. Egger's appointment of Charles Eckles, 31, of 105 Spruce Road, to the commission seat resigned by Leo T. Cronin, last month.

Councilmen Robert R. Souza and Lee Nelder voted against the appointment after Souza's attempt to get the council to go into closed session to discuss the 10 applications for the position defeated.

After Souza called for the closed session, Councilman Francis J. O'Connell said he was opposed to it.

There's never been a closed session for this purpose before, O'Connell said. It should be done at an open meeting, he said.

Councilmas Cornelis Van Vliet agreed and Egger nominated Eckles, a draftsman with a San Francisco architectural firm.

Souza said it was "highly inappropriate" to discuss Eckles's qualifications at an open meeting, and that it was jnfair to make a judgment without talking to him.

Van Vliet told Souza that when Souza was mayor he made appointments without discussing them with the council before hand.

"I tried to get executive sessions. You people wouldn't give them to me," Souza replied.

The Fairfax City Council also:

SLIDES — Viewed a multi-screen slide show entitled "Fairfax '70," prepared by the sixth grade class of Deer Park School.

TREES — Authorized spending $285 to have Morrison Tree Experts of San Anselmo cut down and remove three trees, one dying and two in danger of falling, along Glen Drive, and put over until June 8 Egger's suggestion that the city adopt a policy of planting two new trees for every one it removes.

ENGINEERING — Put over until June 8 a report from the city engineer regarding extra engineering charges to the city for slide repair work on Forrest Avenue.

MEADOWLAND — Formalized a stop work order issued by Dale W. Hostrup, building inspector, on the Meadowland development which was annexed to the city last year. Residents of the area have criticized the developer, Mathew Farr, for failing to complete promised projects in the area.

BRIDGE — Discussed complaints about repairs made on the Meadow Way Bridge, and postponed further discussion until June 8, when Egger said residents of the area will be present with a petition.

CONTRACT — At the request of Fire Chief Charles Thornton, canceled an agreement with the Marin Municipal Water District for a pipeline extension on Laurel Avenue. Thornton said that if a proposed water district bond issue passes, the work would be paid by the bonds at no cost to the city.

MEETING — Adjourned to its next regular meeting at 8 p.m. June 8.

BCDC Elections Bills Gaining

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Assembly committees have cleared bills aiming toward election of Bay Conservation and Development Commission members and extending the jurisdiction of the agency.

The Local Government Committee approved Thursday legislation that would establish election districts within the nine-county San Francisco Bay region to enable direct election of commissioners.

The Water Committee passed a bill making BCDC responsible for developing a multi-billion dollar master plan for disposal of wastes in the Bay-Delta region.

Both measures are by Assemblyman John T. Knox, D-Richmond.

The Local Government Committee also cleared a bill by Assemblyman John F. Dunlap, D-Vallejo, that would restore the proxy system for commission members.

Joint Meeting

Driectors of the North Marin County Water District, Marin Municipal Water District and Sonoma County Water Agency will hold a joint special meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the offices of the North Marin district to discuss the Russian River water project.

Bel Marin Checking Experts On Dredging

The Bel Marin Keys Community Services District board has begun interviewing representatives of engineering firms which have applied to make a study of dredging lagoons and waterways in the district, according to Secretary Betty Zoeller.

The board interviewed Myron Noble of Dames and Moore of San Francisco Thursday night and will interview a representative of Crawford Marine Co. of San Francisco at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday at the community center.

Piano Rolls

LYNDON, Ky. (AP) — A collection of ragtime piano rolls larger than any other is claimed here by collector William Dodson.

Dodson says he has the only complete Maple Leaf set on hand-punched rolls made by Scott Joplin of St. Louis. He says 160 ragtime pieces are included in his collection of some 5,000 paper rolls.

Costliest Proposition Promoted As 'Tax Reform'

Many proposals that will cost taxpayers money will be up for vote June 2. There will be a $246 million state bond issue for medical and health facilities; school tax increases in five Marin districts; sewer, fire station and recreation center bonds in San Rafael; park and recreation center bonds in Novato; bonds for a city hall-library site in Sausalito.

But by far the most expensive proposal put before the voters on that day is Proposition 8. This is hailed as a tax reform measure. Its proponents claim it would relieve the property taxpayer of much of the costs of schools and welfare.

HOW WOULD it do this? Very simply. It would amend the California Constitution to provide that (1) not less than 50 per cent of the cost of the public school system should be borne by the state, and (2) not less than 90 per cent of the cost of welfare services should be borne by the state.

Where would the state get the money? Proposition 8 says not a word about that.

The answer, of course, is that the legislature would have to provide for getting the money by raising existing state taxes and creating new ones.

NOBODY KNOWS how much it would cost Californians in future years if Proposition 8 became part of the state constitution. The legislative analyst has figured the cost for next fiscal year would be $1,130,000,000 — more than one and one-tenth billions. But that is only the start.

The cost for next fiscal year can be figured because it would be based on this year's school budgets.

But with the state mandated to pay 50 per cent of school costs, how high those budgets would go in future years is unpredictable.

As Robert C. Brown, executive vice president of the California Taxpayers' Association, and Mrs. Edwin Rudin, president of the League of Women Voters of California, point out in a ballot argument against the proposal, it "places a major part of the state budget in the hands of 1,144 school boards and out of control of the legislature." But the legislature would still have to find ways to raise the money.

NOTHING IN PROPOSITION 8 guarantees any reduction in property taxes. There is no provision that county or school district tax rates would be reduced proportionately to the increase in state aid.

This measure was qualified for the ballot by an initiative petition campaign financed by the California Teachers Association and the California Association of County Supervisors. The teacher group no doubt sees it as making it easier to get bigger school budgets and hence higher salaries. The county supervisors association was intrigued by the idea of wishing welfare costs onto the state.

However, many county boards of supervisors — including Marin's — have come out against the measure, as have the American Federation of Teachers, the California School Boards Association, the California Taxpayers' Association, and most significantly, the League of Women Voters.

THE LEAGUE of Women Voters has a policy against taking sides. Its aim is simply to inform. But on investigation of Proposition 8, it departed from policy to join in the arguments against the measure which accompany the ballot.

Proposition 8 is not tax reform. It would not lower property taxes, and it would increase other taxes. It should be resoundingly defeated.

Middle East Drifts Toward Full-Scale War Involving U.S.

WASHINGTON — The drift in the Middle East at an ever-faster tempo is toward another full-scale war. The worry of those with a long background of knowledge looking on from the outside is that it may already be too late to prevent a disaster.

Two months ago the Nixon administration announced that the Israeli request to buy more Phantoms, the jet fighter-bomber that is such a superb weapon, would be deferred. The announcement clearly stated that if a continuing survey of the military balance in the area showed any change, the decision on the Phantoms would be reversed.

In the Arab world this was received with the familiar howls of irrationality. Instead of recognizing the element of restraint in the decision, following on Sec. of State William P. Rogers' speech of last December calling for an "even-handed" approach to the Middle East, it was taken as another proof of America's total allegiance to Israel.

SINCE THEN another and more alarming element has been introduced in the explosive mix. On April 18 for the first time, according to Israeli sources, Russian pilots flew MIG-21s with Egyptian squadrons. This happened contrary to the belief of most of the Kremlinologists who contended that the Russian military would not be injected directly so far remote from Russian borders. It had for many months been no secret that Russian pilots were training the Egyptians and manning the complex radar devices around key positions.

A new intelligence appraisal is going forward. The best information available is that the Russians are flying defensive missions over the Nile delta; Alexandria, which is their operational center, and the Aswan Dam. They have not yet exchanged fire with Israeli fighters. Therefore, the need at least for the time being is for a cautious approach.

But the alleged restraint of the Russian pilots is small consolation for the Israelis. It limits their action to the Suez area. Their losses with continuous artillery pounding from the Egyptian side of the canal are such that, despite repeated sorties flown by Israel's pilots, they cannot indefinitely hold that line. And they see as a major Russian objective the opening of the canal as a short route for the Soviet Union's fleet into the Indian Ocean and a further challenge to American naval power in the Mediterranean and the Far East.

BOGGED DOWN in the Cambodia-Vietnam quagmire and faced with a revolt in Congress and on the campuses, the administration has given only piecemeal attention to the pillar of smoke on the Egyptian-Israeli borders.

A broad, over-all look not only at Israel's military situation but at the amounting pressures on the economy is the urgent need.

Forty-three per cent of the Israeli budget and 25 per cent of the gross national product are going into defense. While Israeli leaders say proudly that this can be sustained indefinitely, the showings in budgetary deficits, foreign currency reserves and other fiscal measurements tell another story.

A top-level commission appointed by the President should review all of Israel's needs. This would be with the recognition that sustaining this nation into which so much hope and so much treasure have gone is essential to American policy in the Middle East.

THE 25 PHANTOMS Israel wants to buy would cost about $100 million. At least another $100 million would go for Skyhawks to sustain the Israeli Air Force over the years. That sizable bill for a beleaguered nation of 2,500,000 inhabitants can hardly be fitted into the present squeeze.

A fourth Arab-Israeli war carries the threat of far greater perils than the previous wars. If Russian "defensive" pilots turn offensive, the present Israeli ratio of superiority in pilot capability and maintenance — as high perhaps as four or five to one — could be overcome. Would the call then go out for direct American assistance? Here is the formula for an American-Russian confrontation and that, supposedly, both powers seek to avoid.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

No Explosion Planned On Moon

Reference your editorial of April 23 in which you mentioned a scientific experiment involving plutonium which was to have taken place on the moon during the flight of Apollo 13.

On the first manned mission to the moon, Apollo 11, 15 watts of heat from a decaying plutonium source was used to keep the seismic instruments above their minimum operating temperature of minus 65 degrees F. The temperatures during the long lunar night (equal to 14 earth days) can drop to minus 250 degrees F.

On the Apollo 12 manned mission last November, a similar nuclear generator was taken along to furnish heat for an array of instruments left there by the crew. The generator has been effectively producing more than 73 watts of power since that flight.

The cask of plutonium which was jettisoned was part of a nuclear-powered auxiliary power source called SNAP-27 aboard the lunar module. It was to be left on the moon to furnish heat and power for the effective operation of moon-based instruments.

There was no plan or device for Apollo 13 which would create a nuclear explosion on the moon. As is the case in all nuclear activities, elaborate safety measures were taken to insure that no hazard results from the use of the material. The safe disposal of the 8.36 pounds of SNAP-27 fuel was demonstrated in the return of Apollo 13 when the device dropped into the ocean depths some 600 miles from the spot where the astronauts landed . . .

Should Be Abortion If Child Unwanted

I am appalled at your editorial of May 4, opposing the attempt to liberalize the California abortion law.

The case of the baby who died in a tent on windy Mount Tamalpais several weeks ago is a case where surely it would have been more humane, both to the young mother (if she wished) and the infant, to have prevented further development of a month or two old embryo than to have a battered and broken human baby die miserably as it did. Surely this was an unwanted child.

Let's face facts. There are around 100,000 illegal abortions in the state each year causing pain, deformity or deaths. These abortions go on in spite of the law. It is far better to permit the woman and her physician to decide whether the tiny embryo is going to have a fair start in life. It is not our right to impose an unwanted life on her, or insist that an unwanted child be forced to exist without parental support emotionally, financially, and morally.

Media To Blame For Many Troubles

Much of the troubles on the campuses of the nation can be laid flatly and squarely on the news media, definitely not exempting the Independent-Journal.

May I illustrate? Your May 6 edition devotes most of its front page to highly incendiary news of campus violence, including a four column-six inch photograph.

Yet you have buried in small print on Page 4 the material for a front page headline which, if it didn' rock the nation, should at least topple the faith of some of our well-meaning but misguided gullible youth in the pronouncements of promulgators of revolution:

To wit, your AP report tells us that in less than one week the allied forces have seized in Cambodia thousands of tons of enemy weapons, ammunition, military equipment and food — in one area alone 64 trucks and 4,000 weapons (ammunition that would otherwise have been used to kill not only South Vietnamese but thousands of our own boys).

So this is cause for deadly nation-wide riots! — for impeaching a president aiming at saving lives — at shortening the war!

Religion And Psychology Have Much In Common

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

Religion and psychology both have the common aim of relating to the individual human's needs and to his unquieted yearnings. To add life to years, not just years to life, goes the motto.

Religion and psychology deal with the same stuff that weaves the tapestry of human drives and human dreams. Their lines of communication are the tiny nerve cells and the undescribable soul cells. Their coded system is aspiration and dialogue, symbols and meanings that reach out for the message.

Religion and psychology mutually deal with the wisdom of keeping solitary silence occasionally, in order to master the art of listening to others and to one's self. For, alas, people often speak so much they can't hear themselves, or shout so loud that they forget the mighty language of the "still small voice."

Religious enlightenment and psychological insight teach us to take time out to understand people as much as we spend time to make them understand us. For you really don't make people do anything until they are understanding and willing. Understanding is a two-way street and the far greater challenge and fulfillment is to understand rather than to be understood — to be critical of one's self rather than of others.

BUT RELIGION and psychology will do nothing for us unless we apply them properly. Soap neatly wrapped up in a linen closet will do nothing for dirty hands. Similarly, the powerful tools of religion and psychology are of no avail unless they are used authentically. And frankly, it's not easy in our space and speed age to gain the graces that both of these arts of life can evince to us. For both the meditative heart and the introspective mind require time and can never be rushed, never cut short.

The ancient prophet speaks of the healing power of dialogue, outer and inner dialogue: "Come now, let us reason together, says the Lord." His demands, not harsh nor stern, are quiet, modest and consoling. The Supreme Psychiatrist asks not blind obedience, cruel repression, tyrannic brain-washing. He simply and gently suggests dialogue, communication, with no emotion stifled, with no logic compromised; yielding to reason not to dictation ; to understanding, not to individual surrender.

THE PROPHET, like the wise psychologist, also speaks of motivation — of a new heart and new spirit — of the need for constant self-renewal toward an inner responsiveness. For it takes an act of wisdom to rise up daily and seek renewal without overdemanding of one's self by either condemning his past, or confining himself to its shackles. And it takes an act of courage to stand up to one's self, not as if it were standing up against one's self. For it is the timid and frightened soul that thinks of self-scrutiny as self-cowardice and self-degradation.

Perhaps one of the hardest things for the much talkative human is to stand up courageously and utter these few syllables: I was wrong. I made a mistake. I am sorry. I will forgive and forget. And Perhaps it is the purpose of religious wisdom and psychological insight to give us the tools for creating the proper mood. "Come now let us reason together."

COUNTRY PARSON

"Usually your friends will let you get by with mistreating them if you'll just be cheerful about it."

Fire Ecology

Fire used to be regarded as an unnatural enemy of nature. Forest fires were regarded as wanton waste. Uncontrolled, they still are.

But fire has been with us for millions of years and many plants and animals have become adapted to it and dependent on burning. Some seeds can't germinate without fire. Some plants can't mature unless competing plants are burned off. Some giants of the forest are in constnat danger if the underbrush is not burned and becomes too large. Some plants demand ashes for growth. And since animals are ultimately dependent upon certain kinds of plants, anything which affects plants affects them.

Like everything else in ecology, there is a delicate balance between too much and too little fire. It is an old idea. The American Indian practiced controlled burning. But fire ecology is an infant as a science. And it is a fascinating one.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BRICKBATS to striking students (and teachers and administrators) who use concern over the Cambodia involvement as an excuse to boycott and try to shut down schools. Not only do they "cut off their own noses to spite their faces" when they refuse to attend or hold classes, but they interfere with the rights of all other students.

BOUQUETS to the many students (and teachers and administrators) who, although they may be equally concerned over the trend of the war, are sensible enough to want to continue education as normally as possible, and who attend and hold classes despite the disturbances of the disrupters and the encouragement of those disturbances by other teachers and administrators.

BOUQUETS to Brian Perkins of San Rafael on winning a California Newspaperboy Foundation scholarship, a distinct honor to a deserving boy.

TRY AND STOP ME

An alert delicatessen proprietor in Palm Springs has added Chinese fortune cookies to a menu already laden with bagels, lox, and blintzes. When one habitue of the establishment, a nontalker known as "Silent Sam" Brisson, opened his first fortune cookie there, it read, "So stop reading already; EAT!"

Punster Walter Gibson, of Cleveland, claims that the girl he's pining for is (1.) Good to the regiment, but rotten to the corps; (2.) A cheerleader from Ohio State whom he met by chants; and (3.) A wise lass who wouldn't allow a caller to interrupt her boss, a prominent judge, while he was dining. "Nothing doing," she told the caller. "His Honor is at steak!"

Problem Of Vietnam War: Sufficient Bodies For All

WASHINGTON — One of the things that constantly impresses people in Washington is the accuracy of the body counts in Indochina. No part of the war has been handled with as much scientific accuracy as enemy body counting, and we know to the last Commie aggressor how many Viet Cong have been killed each day.

The Office of enemy Body Counts is located at the Pentagon and has a staff of 23,678 people. The director of OEBC is a civilian named Hammersmith Moody, who could safely be called the "father of enemy body counting."

"WHEN THE WAR first started," Moody said, "body counting was a hit or miss proposition. Our boys would go into an area, shoot up the place, burn down the village, and then phone in a figure of enemy killed to Saigon. This figure was arrived at by questioning each GI who was in on the operation and asking him, 'How many gooks did you get?'

"Now, almost every outfit in Vietnam had soldiers from Texas in it, and no matter what the other GIs said, the Texans would insist they got more. So everyone kept escalating the figures and pretty soon there was some question as to how accurate the count was. To further complicate matters, the South Vietnamese troops found out the easiest way to please the American high command in Saigon was to hand in high enemy body counts.

"The more enemy the ARVN commander could report dead, the more equipment, medals and promotions he could get for himself and his outfit, and pretty soon South Vietnamese officers were flooding Saigon with exaggerated body count statistics."

"THERE DOESN'T seem anything wrong with that," I said. "After all, no one got hurt."

"True," Moody said. "The complication arose, though, when these figures were reported to the Pentagon and released to the public. At the rate we were reporting enemy deaths, we would have run out of anyone to kill in the first 16 months of the war. How could we justify our staying in Vietnam after we had reported that everyone in North Vietnam was already dead?"

"It isn't easy," I admitted.

"So I was asked to develop a new body count system which would make it possible to prove that we are beating the Communists, at the same time guaranteeing there were enough left to make us keep our commitment."

"HOW DID you do it?"

"We took all the counts submitted by the various units and divided by six.

"But even this figure was too high to announce every day, so we set up what could be called an enemy body count bank. Now when things are going bad and the press and public are getting restless, we release figures from the bank which will prove how well we're doing in Vietnam."

"ARE YOU DOING the same thing in Cambodia?" I asked.

"The emphasis in Cambodia has been on supplies rather than bodies, but we're still getting very high reports from the field. If we can report 10 enemy dead for every ton of rice seized, we'll be very satisfied."

"Don't you have a recognition problem in Cambodia? How do you know when you see a Cambodian or North Vietnamese body that it belonged to the enemy?"

Moody replied, "Through dental charts."

CHURCHES' WOMEN GAIN BIGGER ROLE

From Ushers To Decision-Makers, Man's Formerly Exclusive Jobs Being Shared

NEW YORK (AP) — In a downtown church in Minneapolis, women now serve as ushers, showing people to their seats and taking up the collection — a role traditionally reserved to men.

It was "time for a change," says the Rev. Francis J. Fleming, pastor of St. Olaf Roman Catholic church.

And the men seem to approve.

"They enjoy it," says a parish secretary, Pat T'Kach. Most of the ushers are attractive young working women."

Father Fleming says there was a shortage of males available for the ushering task, so the long-standing practice of using only men needed to go, along with other customs that have come to impede rather than enhance worship.

Women, in an increasing number of other congregations, now also serve as lectors, or readers, for Scripture lessons, as education directors, choirmasters and song leaders for worship services.

Cynthia Wedel, the president of the National Council of Churches and the first woman to hold the post, says:

"At one time, the role of holding bazaars and church suppers fit the role of women in general, but today women are better educated and they want more significant tasks to do."

Mrs. Wedel says the continuing restrictions are "frustrating for many women who want to be considered on the basis of their ability rather than their sex, and when this frustration comes to the surface in action, it's all to the good. That's how things begin to change."

In Detroit recently, a young nun, Sister Mary Corrine Bart, suceeded a bishop as the Catholic archdiocese' chief representative of religious orders, including 4,000 monks and nuns. Says she:

"There's a movement in the church of women taking more of the decision-making roles wherever they are qualified."

The Vatican 1970 yearbook lists, for the first time, six positions filled by women. There are 66 women employed at the Vatican.

Women serve increasingly on national church boards and agencies and on local church policy-making groups, both Protestant and Catholic, including a growing number of Episcopal vestries and some Lutheran councils, which once excluded them.

However, men still dominate the parish governing units. Male delegates also far outnumber women at denominational conventions, with women excluded from some Lutheran national bodies. For the first time this year, under a constitution change, women will be elibible for seats at the Episcopal convention.

Although Methodist, American Baptist and Presbyterian bodies admit women to the ordained ministry, few are on the clergy lists, and they're practically barred from it in Episcopal, Lutheran, Southern Baptist, Catholic and Orthodox churches in this country.

However, the question of women clergy has become a lively issue, with various study groups analyzing it. Some European Lutheran churches have authoriezd women ministers, amid considerable controversy.

Numerous Catholic theologians say there's no doctrinal barrier to women in the priesthood, and a recent Dutch Catholic lay-clergy council urged their admission to that vocation.

From women groups themselves, the pressure also was on for fuller church rights.

A "masculine-dominated church relegates women to second-class status," charges Mrs. Peggy Way, assistant professor at the University of Chicago Divinity School.

Although a majority of church members are women, she says, they have only minority representation on decision-making bodies of congregations, in the professional clergy, in seminaries and in running national church programs.

The church does not even "allow us to use the monies we have raised," she writes in The Christian Ministry, a bimonthly for clergymen. Her reference was to the fact that numerous church women's groups regularly raise funds, which are channeled into programs controlled by men.

"Women's oppression and women's liberation is a basic part of the struggle of blacks, browns, youth and others," Peggy Billings, a United Methoidst of New York, told a recent assembly of the National Council of Churches.

She said that when the council was organized 20 years ago, 5 per cent of its policy-making delegates were women and the proportion still is only 12.1 per cent.

Calling this typical of the makeup of church conventions, she added:

"Any visitor from outer space would conclude that the churches are composed of white-skinned male clergy over 40."

Church restrictions against women stemmed largely from a phrase from St. Paul, saying they should "keep silent" in the churches. Scholars have long pointed out the advice meant simply for church groups to comply with prevailing social custom at the time. And they note that the custom — of female silence in public — is no more.

IN TIBURON POST — Sherman Glenn, first-year student at Golden Gate Baptist Seminary, has been hired as part time minister of youth activities in the Tiburon Baptist Church. A resident of Modesto, Glenn has extensive experience with Inter-Varsity, a Christian outreach group on college campuses.

Baptist Layman Urges Annual Pastor's Day

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Churches should observe an appreciation for our pastors day similar to the Laymen's Sunday celebrated in most Baptist churches, says Carl W. Tiller, layman president of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention.

"Let us find some occasion each year when he can let our appreciation for our pastors overflow in a specific way," Tiller said in his regular weekly column in the Capital Baptist.

New Association For Understanding

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) —A new association has been ish-Christian understanding. It rian) Church Scotland and the Roman Catholic Church.

A similar organization has been working in Glacgow, Scotland's biggest city, for some years. The new association has not yet been named.

ST. ANTHONY OF PADUA — Architects drawing depicts the new parish church planned for construction on South Novato Boulevard in Novato. Men of the church will be calling house-to-house tomorrow to raise funds for the $300,000 project.

New Parish Seeks Funds For Building

Men of the new St. Anthony of Padua Roman Catholic parish in Novato will launch tomorrow a campaign to finance construction of the parish's church, according to Rev. Daniel J. Sheehan, pastor.

William Haley and Vincent McGovern are co-chairmen of the committee, which has set a goal of $300,000 to finance construction of the new church and rectory, and to acquire the land and furnishings needed.

Construction of the new church on South Novato Boulevard will start shortly.

"We are hoping to raise at least one third of that amount as a solid down payment but quietly hope that even more will be forthcoming," Rev. Sheehan said. Father Sheehan was assigned to the parish on its formation in November of 1968.

More than 100 men of the parish have agreed to make the calls tomorrow, on any members of the parish home to receive them.

Last Sunday a member of the parish spoke at each Mass to explain the program.

Reports will be turned in to the present rectory at 120 Karen Drive immediately after the men complete their calls.

The proposed new church design was prepared by the associated architects Fred Houweling and Robert Hegman of Menlo Park.

Pentecost Communion To Feature American Tunes

Old American tunes of traditional folklore will be used in the Pentecost Communion Service at St. Luke Presbyterian Church, San Rafael, tomorrow at 10 a.m.

Written and directed by the director of music, James Groves, the service will give a contemporary interpretation with old American tunes in a traditional setting.

Accompanists in an instrumental group will be: Guitars, Elizabeth Huddleston, Polly Heys, Barbara Koenig, Stacy Yates, and Sandi Kent; double bass, Debbie Daunt; harpsichord, Chris Dill; piano, Susan Maggy; Organ, Mary Carol Petersen. Also participating are the carol choir, chapel choir, and meistersinger, boys and girls of 3rd and 4th grade.

Young people who will make their Confession of Faith include Elaine Deen, Duncan Frederick, Lynne Gilliland, Greg Hassold, Jeff Koenig, Mark Perry, Nancy Perry, Lisa Perry, Lisa Petersen, John Simmelink, and Debbie Smith.

The service will be concluded with the serving of the Lord's Supper, it was announced by Rev. Henry Kent, pastor.

Lutherans To Hold First Confirmation

A splinter Lutheran Church group consisting of four families who think Marin County Lutheran churches are too liberal will hold its first confirmation at 8:30 a.m. Sunday.

Betty Marggraff said her son Bruce is the first confirmand the group has had since it began meeting in October in a room above the Cloud Five Restaurant in Novato.

The little church was founded because "we want to hold onto the Bible," Mrs. Marggraff said.

"We felt that the Lutheran churches in Marin are affiliated with liberal groups," she said.

The group is a Lutheran mission group, an arm of the Wisconsin synod, Mrs. Marggraff explained. It is the only branch of the small Wisconsin sect in Marin, she said.

The congregation — the Irwin Sweat, Bruce Marggraff, Gale Ackerman and William Toben families — is led by Pastor Robert Waldschmidt who drives up each Sunday from his church in Belmont, San Mateo County.

The meeting room is donated by the Cloud Five restaurant, Mrs. Marggraff said.

The Marggraffs and Tobens are from San Rafael; the other two families from Novato.

Encyclopedia On Saints Published

ROME (UPI)—The Pontifical Lateran University has published what is billed as the Roman Catholic church's most complete "Encyclopedia of Saints."

The 12-volume work, written by 500 experts from 19 nations, relates the lives of 20,000 recognized or legendary saints and candidates for sainthood. It has 3,000 ilustrations.

War, Youth Dialogue To Follow Communion

Town and gown will talk over the issues of the Southeast Asia war tomorrow, after the 10 a.m. Pentecostal celebration of Communion in St. Stephen's Episcopal Parish, Belvedere, according to Rev. John S. Thorton, rector.

TO SPEAK — Calvin R. Zeissler, missionary to the Philippines, will be a featured speaker at the Central Assembly of God tomorrow at 7 p.m., according to an announcement made today by Rev. Reuben J. Sequeira pastor of the church.

Zeissler will relate some of his experiences and will tell of the progress of missions in the Philippines.

Members of the parish and interested guests will participate in a dialogue with two undergraduates from the University of California in Berkeley and a Boalt Hall law student and professor.

"The one and only purpose of the meeting is to get a dialogue going between the generations, not to force any resolutions on the issues of the war and campus unrest," Rev. Thornton said. The informal discussion will "provide a chance to learn from the collegians about their goals and tactics."

Reverend Thornton suggested that interested participants bring a bag lunch, for the dialogue is likely to continue past the noon hour.

Graduation Set

The twelfth Annual Commencement Service of the San Francisco Conservative Baptist Theological Seminary will be held in the auditorium of the Hamilton Square Baptist Church, Geary and Franklin Streets, San Francisco, at 7:45 p.m. Monday, with the president, Dr. Arno Q. Weniger presiding.

Finnish Church Aids

HELSINKI (UPI) — The Church of Finland has appropriated $189,000 for its foreign aid programs in 1970, church officials said. They said the bulk of the money, which will be followed by a supplementary budget later this year, will be spent on educational and other development aid.

Math Teacher In Novato Pulpit

James Kirizian, mathematics teacher at Sinaloa Junior High School and former pastor of the Bethel Armenian Evangelical Church in San Francisco, will speak at the 11 a.m. service tomorrow at the Bethel Baptist Church in Novato.

His topic will be "Guideposts for Thinking Men."

He will fill the pulpit in the absence of Dr. Wilbur J. Bullard, the regular pastor, who is attending the American Baptist Convention in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Presbyterians Plan Communion In Round

Westminster United Presbyterian Church will repeat its communion in the round at both of tomorrow's Pentecost services, according to Dr. William M. Perdue, pastor.

The liturgy will be similar to that inaugurated at the Tiburon church's last communion celebration, Reverend Perdue said.

INSIDE A PRISON

It's Tough To Be A Real Christian

FOLSOM (UPI)—It "takes guts" to be a religious man in Father William P. Kinane's parish.

The Roman Catholic priest tends the spiritual needs in rock-walled Folsom State Prison—California's toughest penal facility —which houses society's losers.

The red-haired Irishman admits that the prisoners are not the most receptive group for religion.

And, Father Kinane said, "it takes guts" for a convict to display a real interest in religion. He said the prisoner must often endure the unfriendly criticism of his fellow inmates.

The other convicts feel a man with new-found religion is merely trying to manipulate the system.

"Have you thrown away the gun to take up the Bible?" is a question often thrown at the convict by his fellow prisoners, the chaplain said during an interview in the institution's 70-year-old chapel just off the main yard.

'HE IS SINCERE'

Father Kinane said if a convict can endure this type of treatment and still attend Mass on a regular basis, "I know he is sincere."

He admitted that only a small number attend his services. "They're pretty set in their ways when they get here," he said.

"I play an important role for some individuals here," he said. "I know a lot have been helped by religion."

"A lot get their first taste of religion in prison. They had no contact with the church on the outside."

Can a man be helped in prison?

UP TO INDIVIDUAL

"It depends on the individual," he said. "He can make progress through the education available at the prison. If he has the initiative, he can make a go of it."

The 37-year-old Father Kinane was ordained in his native Ireland 13 years ago. He was first assigned to a parish in nearby Fair Oaks, coming to California because the Sacramento diocese financed his seminary training.

His first taste of prison work came a short time later when he was assigned to the Susanville Conservation Center, a mountain camp in Lassen County operated by the state Department of Corrections.

In September 1967 Father Kinane was assigned to Folsom —a facility for convicts who cannot adjust to the state's other prisons.

HARD-CORE TYPES

Folsom, which gained nationwide notoriety when singer Johnny Cash recorded a concert there, houses 2,350 men. Most have "graduated" from less severe institutions, and they are regarded as the hard-core types. Their average age is 40—well above that of the department's other facilities.

The priest's day starts at 8 a.m. and ends at 4:30 p.m. He lives in a parish rectory just outside the walls of the prison.

His daily routine includes a morning Mass in the chapel, preparation of parole board reports, initial interviews with new inmates and fielding the spontaneous problems of the inmates.

On Sundays he and The Rev. James R. McGee, the Protestant chaplain, take turns overseeing a service conducted by the prison's Black Muslim group. Prison regulations require all religious services to be regulated by a chaplain.

Father Kinane's assistant is an inmate whom he goodnaturedly says "has had several years of experience here and at other institutions."

The priest is also on the receiving end of some instruction from the inmates. Several are teaching him to play the guitar.

"But he's lousy," joked one convict.

Another convict who plays the organ for Mass said, "You should hear how he sings at Mass—he's the only guy I've ever accompanied who couldn't find one key I played."

The soft-spoken priest with the Irish brogue just smiled.

G. SPENCER BRENTWOOD FIGURED A GUY WITH PLENTY OF WILL POWER COULD PLAY CLOSE TO THE EDGE AND STILL KEEP HIS FOOTING—WITH NO ONE THE WISER IF HE CHEATED NOW AND THEN. AT FIRST HE THOUGHT OF THEM AS "INDISCRETIONS." THEN THE PATH TURNED SHARPLY DOWN HILL AND HE FOUND HE COULDN'T GET OFF OF IT—AND THERE WAS NO ONE IN SIGHT TO HELP HIM.

Too many men have ended in divorce court—or in a sanitarium—because they miscalculated their ability to come back from the brink. Dodgers Overpower S.F. Despite 2 Mays Homers

ij Sports

Saturday, May 16, 1970 Independent-Journal, 21

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Los Angeles was getting off to a sluggish start in 1970, what Manager Walter Alston moaned about most was the inability to use the Dodgers' speed.

"We can't even run," re - marked Alston earlier this season, "if we can't get on base."

The Dodgers are getting on base a lot more these days and they're running more, too. As a result they've won six of their last eight games, the latest an 11-5 slugfest Friday night against San Francisco before 32,603 fans at Dodger Stadium.

Los Angeles will shoot for its third straight victory Saturday night when Alen Foster, 2-3, opposes the Giant's Gaylord Perry, 4-4.

The Dodgers lead the National League in stolen bases and they tacked on three more Friday night, giving them 44 for the season.

"We've got more speed than we've ever had," Alston remarked. "Maury Wills and Willie Davis did an awful lot of stealing for us in earlier seasons and they had some great years, especially Wills.

"But now we've got the Willie Crawfords and Bill Grabarkewizs and Manny Motas and we still have Wills and Davis."

NOTHING NEW

Speed is not necessarily anything new to Los Angeles but three home runs in one game is. Crawford, Tom Haller and Wes Parker hammered out homers Friday night, the first time this year the Dodgers have slugged three in one game.

Strange Names Among N.L.'s Top Hitters

LOS ANGELES — There are some strange names among the Top 10 National League hitters. Batters who never previously were among the leaders are on stratospheric levels. It isn't because the ball is any livelier this year.

Chub Feeney's National League Headquarters issued its upteenth communique on that point this week, an official pronouncement which was endorsed as the whole truth and nothing but the truth by the president of the company that manufacturers the ball.

The weekly communiques from Feeney's headquarters are beginning to sound like those of the Shakespearan character whose word was doubted because he protested too much.

Bill Grabarkewitz, the Dodger with the tongue-twisting handle, is one of the fellows among the Top 10. Grbkwitz, as Los Angeles newspapers condense Grabarkewitz so it will fit in box scores, "leads the league in syllables and someday may lead it in hitting," according to one L. A. writer.

Says May Averages Don't Count

When asked whether he thought this was a possibility, Grabarkewitz explained his .386 batting average, 122 points above the .264 he hit last season for the Dodgers' farm club at Spokane, in this manner:

"Well, May averages don't mean a thing. I hit over .300 in the minors (.308 at Albuquerque in 1968) and I've seen several pitchers up here who haven't impressed me. You've got to get your two or three hits a game off them and then swing and pray against Seaver and Marichal and the other good ones."

Grabarkewitz didn't mention the jackrabbit tendencies of the 1970 baseball as being even partly responsible for his sensational hitting this year. His analysis of major league pitchings, however, was a logical explanation.

Pete Rose Said The Same Thing

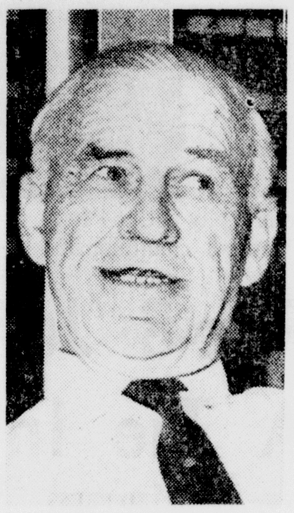
But Grabarkewitz' analysis of present day big league pitching isn't exactly new. After he won his second straight National League batting championship a year ago, Pete Rose of the Reds said the same thing.

Rose pointed out that since 1962, 40 pitchers were brought up from the minors to staff expansion teams and replace pitchers plucked by the expansion clubs from the old established eight-team rosters.

"I don't say they shouldn't be up here," said Rose, "but if it weren't for expansion they still would be in the minors."

Rose predicted at the outset of the 1970 campaign that with major league pitching being what it is, plus the new carpeted infields and outfields, the day of the .400 hitter might return.

And with the 1970 baseball, the home run total at the end of the season might need a tabulation assist from a computer.



CLARK SHAUGHNESSY

'T' Father Shaughnessy Dies At 78

By BOB MYERS

SANTA MONICA (AP) — In his lifetime, Clark Shaughnessy could never quite squelch an aphorism—that he was the father of the T-formation in football. He was, however, undeniably the father of the modern T-attack.

Shaughnessy, who devoted six decades of his life to the sport as a player, coach and counsellor, died in Santa Monica Hospital Friday. Death at 78 came from natural causes.

Funeral services will be conducted Wednesday afternoon at Pierce Bros. Mortuary in Santa Monica.

THE SUMMIT

It was at Stanford, however, in 1940 that Shaughnessy reached the summit of his success as a college mentor.

He took a team of much the same personnel that had lost hine games the year before and led it to the Rose Bowl and defeated a good Nebraska team, 21-13.

The magic key was the T.

Shaughnessy was the first to say the T was really the oldest formation in football. What he did was simply to rejuvenate it, dust it off and counter-attack the general single and double wing maneuvers. The T-explosion followed around the country.

He had an All - American quarterback to execute it, Frankie Albert, and a wonderful supporting cast of talent.

CINDERELLA THEME

The Shaughnessy - Stanford story had a Cinderella theme. Shaughnessy's coaching post at Chicago vanished when football was erased from the US campus.

Out of a job, Shaughnessy attended the national collegiate winter convention in Los Angeles. He was looking for a coaching position but credentials from Chicago were hardly over-powering.

Friends introduced Clark to Stanford athletic officials. The marriage followed. Two losers made history.

Flying Angels Top A's

OAKLAND (AP) — Young Ken Tatum of the California Angels is not only one of the best relief pitchers in baseball. He also may be the most honest.

"I don't do my job," he said after the red hot Angels rallied to defeat the Oakland A's 5-4 Friday night. The victory was the ninth in the last 11 games for California.

"I'm supposed to come in the game and protect the lead for the starter and I didn't do it," Tatum said.

Tatum came in for starter Rudy May in the sixth with California holding a 2-1 lead. He gave up a two-run single to the first batter he faced—Oakland catcher Dave Duncan.

BRIEF LEAD

The Athletics took a brief 3-2 lead in that sixth inning before the Angels rose up to score three in the seventh.

Tatum, now 2-0, has won the last two Angel games with 4 2/3 innings of relief work in which he allowed only three hits and one run. That run was a solo homer by the A's Don Mincher.

"I'll be thinking about that homer for a long time," Tatum said. "That was a bad pitch and could have cost us the game." Fortunately for the Angels there was no one on base when Mincher connected.

SNAPS STRING

The defeat snapped a three-game win string for Oakland. Manager John McNamara had hoped to win three of four from California and get back in the pennant race.

"Now we'll have to win three out of three," he said.

Jim Hunter, now 5-3, the victim of both home runs, was the loser.

The teams were scheduled again this afternoon and complete the series with a double header Sunday.

John Odom, 3-2, and Rollie Fingers, 2-1, will pitch for Oakland Sunday against rookie Greg Garrett, 2-0, and Clyde Wright, 4-2, for the Angels.

MARIN CATHOLIC HIGH

Coaches Are Reinstated

Marin Catholic High School principal Monsignor Edward Dullea announced yesterday that faculty members Gary Hughes and Cliff Vattuone have been reinstated to positions from which they were dismissed last week.

Speaking of Hughes, who was fired from his first year positon as athletic director, and head football coach Vattuone, who was dismissed entirely from the faculty, Dullea stated, "Everything has been resolved with the individuals involved, and they have been reinstated."

The action came after a week of discussion between the school's faculty and administration following the dismissals.

The faculty, led by Joseph Breen, head of Marin Catholic's teachers association, sided with Hughes and Vattuone, who also got support from petition-signing students.

THE CHARGES

At the time the dismissals were announced on May 7, the charges against Vattuone were, according to Breen, that he lacked leadership qualities and failed to instill spirit in the football team.

Hughes was charged, said Breen, with causing the baseball team to be barred from post-season play for scheduling a pre-season scrimmage, leaving gym doors unlocked, failing to have football stands erected on schedule because finances weren't available, loss of revenue at the first two football games because of lax organization, and leaving the baseball pitching machine out.

AN EXPERIENCE

A much-relieved Hughes, who had been hesitant to comment before the official announcement of his reinstatement, said, "It's been a learning experience for all of us, and one from which a greater sense of unity througout the entire school can come."

Hughes expressed his belief that the dismissals had resulted in part from a lack of communication between faculty members and the administration.

Vattuone was obviously pleased with the final decision. "I'm glad everything is cleared up," he said.

And he is looking forward to next football season. "We'll have our work cut out for us, but I think we'll be okay," he said.

Upsets In Marin Baseball

Upset was the name of the game in the Marin County Athletic League high school baseball race yesterday, as league leading Redwood Giants and second place San Marin Mustangs, suffering letdowns after their crucial game Wednesday, were knocked off by non-contenders.

Redwood took an 8 to 5 beating from sixth place San Rafael at Larkspur, and fifth place Tamalpais downed San Marin, 4-2, at Mill Valley.

Terra Linda broke a tie for third place with Novato by defeating the Hornets, 7-3, at Albert Field in San Rafael.

And the Drake Pirates, who came into this week with a record of 0 wins and 10 losses, won their second straight game, knocking off Marin Catholic, 7-5, at Kentfield.

SECOND LOSS

Redwood, which up until Wednesday had been tearing the MCAL apart to the tune of 10 wins and 0 losses, took its second loss in two days but still remains a full game in front of second place San Marin.

The Giants of Larkspur, who lost a tough 1-0 decision to San Marin on Wednesday, were out of this one all the way as San Rafael never trailed and scored four times in the sixth to wrap it up.

The Bulldogs got what proved to be the winning run that inning when Bruce D'Ambra singled to score Chuck Raznakov, after the latter walked and went to third on a misplayed pop fly off the bat of Jim Thorne.

Dirk Gansloser led the assault for San Rafael with three hits in four trips, including a double.

Marin College Gets Grid Bleachers For '70 Season

College of Marin's board of trustees voted unanimously Thursday night to authorize the purchase of 2,000 portable bleacher seats for the school's year-old football field.

Harry Pieper, director of athletics at Marin, stated that the seats, at an estimated cost of $19,000, would be installed in time for the 1970 season. They will be situated with 1,500 on the home side, and 500 for the visiting teams' fans.

The board, which voted 7 - 0 on the proposition, also approved purchase of crowd control fencing to direct fans to the bleachers, a public address system, and the installation at the new field of the scoreboard from the old Kentfield stadium. That was torn down last year to make room for a new science complex and the Marin Tars were forced to move their home field to nearby Marin Catholic High School in Kentfield.

MOVED TURF

They did that literally, by moving the turf and old visitors' stands to what had been Marin Catholic's practice field.

Eventual plans, according to Pieper, call for the transferral of the old stadium lights to the new field, and the installation of permanent fixed steel bleachers. All the portable bleachers could then be moved to the visiting teams' side.

The board also recommended that Marin's physical education staff meet with Marin County high schools which might want to use the Kentfield facility.

HIGHER REVENUE

Marin County Athletic League Commissioner George Corson commented that he had not been informed as to the board's decision. He stated that since the Marin field will not have lights this year, it may not be as desirable for league use as the individual high schools' home fields, where revenue from games would be higher.

After the destruction of the old Kentfield stadium, Corson said, bleachers were installed at Redwood in Larkspur and Tamalpais in Mill Valley and all MCAL teams except Drake and San Marin played home games last year. Drake does not have room to accommodate bleachers, and San Marin plays its home games at nearby Novato High.

Marin Star Welsh Signs With Champs

Gary Welsh, catcher-outfielder for the College of Marin Tars, has signed a contract with the world champion New York Mets, his coach Vic Petreshene announced yesterday.

Welsh, former all-Marin Athletic League baseballer at San Rafael High School, signed for a "modest bonus," according to Petreshene, who helped with the signing.

Welsh, 19, son of William R. Welsh, will finish out the school year at College of Marin and then report to St. Petersburg,Fla., in June and then further assignment with the Mets' rookie team at Marion, Va.

LEFTY BATTER

A former most valuable player award winner while at San Rafael High, he attended University of Texas his freshman year and then College of Marin his sophomore year.

BASEBALL DISPUTE

Players Nix Contract

NEW YORK (AP) — The baseball players and owners still are without a basic contract and there are indications that the squabble may continue until the Curt Flood case runs its course.

Flood's antitrust suit against major league baseball is due to open in New York Tuesday. The former St. Louis Cardinal centerfielder refused to accept the trade that sent him to Philadelphia last winter and is challenging the structure of the game.

The players rejected owners' contract proposal by an overwhelming 505-89 vote earlier in the week. On Friday, the major leagues voted to renew the same offer.

"I don't know what purpose there can be in renewing an offer already rejected so emphatically," said Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players' Association.

'FAIR, GENEROUS'

"The clubs believe their proposal is entirely fair and generous and represents significant gain for the players," said the two league presidents in a statement issued after Friday's meeting.

Miller called the owners' statement "self-serving." "They say they think they were fair," he added. "The players believe the opposite."

So what happens next?

Miller said the players probably would propose another talk with the owners' committee. He made no threats of action although there has been talk by some player representatives of a one-day baseball moratorium on a Saturday when a Game of the Week is televised nationally.

BASIC MATTERS

As basic matters, including the controversial reserve clause, are involved in the Flood case, it was the thinking in some quarters that the stalemate might continue until the owners and players see which way the wind is blowing in Flood's trial.

The players want a larger share of playoff gate receipts (owners offer an increase from 50 to 60 per cent), reduction in the 162-game season (owners have made no counter offer), and improvements in termination pay to include payment when cut during spring training (owners offer an icrease from 30 days pay to 45 days when released during the season but nothing during training).

Higher minimum salary, reduction in maximum pay cut and a new form of grievance procedure with an arbitrator, instead of the commissioner as the final court in all matters except those involving "integrity of the game" already have been granted in the proposed contract.

Olympic Committee Breaks Last Ties With S. Africa

AMSTERDAM (AP) — The International Olympics Committee (IOC) has broken its last ties with South Africa because of racial discrimination in sports.

It was the end of a long fight which had prevented South Africa from competing in the 1964 Tokyo and 1968 Mexico Summer Games.

The decision Friday by a 35-28 vote eliminated the threat of a boycott by apartheid opponents of the 1972 Games in Munich.

Dennis Brutus, president of the South African Non-racial Open Committee for Olympic Sports (SAN-ROC) said that he could not predict how the IOC decision might promote racial integration of sports in South Africa.

He stressed, however, that the main thing was that the black sportsmen had finally won explicit IOC recognition that they were equal to whites.

Other members of the SAN-ROC group predicted that the IOC decision would lead to a complete isolation of white sports in South Africa.

Frank Braun, president of the South African National Olympic Committee, however, estimated that the expulsion of South Africa would put back non-white sportsmen in his country for 50 years.

REP RESIGNS

Reg Honey, South Africa's representative on the IOC, handed in his resignation as a result of the vote.

There were three abstentions in the vote announced by Monique Berlious, the IOC press spokesman.

"The IOC has decided to withdraw recognition of the South African National Olympic Committee," the simple announcement said.

Simmering racial tension exploded in headlines across the world last year when South Africa refused to admit American Negro tennis star Arthur Ashe.

Braun was sharply critical of the IOC move, charging that the best South African boxers and soccer players "might turn over to professionalism.

CAN'T UNDERSTAND

"All our friends have been saying how sorry they are and regret the decision but it is something that we really can not understand."

Avery Brundage, president of the IOC, said: "I cannot make any personal remarks on this issue. The IOC has made its decision . . . and that is that."

Despite a victory for the SAN-ROC the group appeared not to be fully satisfied.

Brutus said his group would not rest until this summer's South African cricket tour of England is canceled.

"Before today's decision, I was 60 per cent certain of the tour being canceled. Now I'm 70 per cent. And I believe a decision to this effect will be announced in the next 14 days."

Brutus said that unless the tour was canceled, the African countries would boycott the Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh, Scotland, which will be held in July.

than Redwood as the Tamalpais Indians came from behind with three runs in the fourth to hand the Mustangs their third loss of the season.

Tam, now with 6 wins and 6 losses, got great relief pitching from Mike Johnson, who came in with nobidy out and the bases loaded in the first inning and calmly struck out the side.

Johnson, who was making his first appearance of the year after being sidelined with a torn ligament, struck out seven during the four innings he worked, and was credited with the win.

The Indians' big break came in the fourth when the Mustangs committed two costly errors that resulted in three runs.

Jim McCammon belted two doubles for Tam, and Steve Dittle had a solo home run in the fifth.

DANIELE HOMERS

Teera Linda, now with 8 wins and 4 losses, broke away from Novato in the fourth inning with five runs off Hornet starter Dave Judnick. Trojan shortstop Bob Daniele capped the surge with a three run inside the park home run to the base of the left-field wall. Scoring ahead of him were Jim Cottington and Bill Berry, who had both singled with two outs.

As far as Drake's Glen Pfaff and Dave MacAusland were concerned the game was something of a rerun of Tuesday's first victory over Terra Linda. MacAusland, who belted a two run game winning triple against the Trojans, did the same thing yesterday. His seventh inning three base shot scored Grant Sutherland and John Loan with the runs that put Drake ahead, 6-5.

Pfaff, who went the distance Tuesday, pitched the final two innings yesterday for his second win of the week.

their's in the first inning when the Dodgers poured across six runs to offset a three-run San Francisco first that was keyed by the first of two Willie Mays' home runs.

608 FOR MAYS

Mays slugged his second homer in the second inning, No. 608 of his career, to cut the Dodgers' lead to a run.

It stayed that way until the fourth when Parker, who also had a double and a single, crashed his fourth home run of the season, a two-run blow, and the Dodgers tallied three more in the seventh to make it a runaway.

Don Sutton picked up the win but he needed help from Joe Moeller and Jim Brewer. Moeller took over in the sixth with two aboard and got out of that jam. He pitched until the eighth when he gave up two walks and a single. It was the first hit he's allowed in nine innings of relief this season.

That's when Brewer entered, with the bases loaded and pinch hitter Ron Hunt at the plate. Brewer got Hunt to pop out and then sailed through the ninth to record his second save in as many nights and his fourth of the season.

Pac-8 Jump Mark Falls; A Tie In Colonial Golf

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Sophomore Jim "Bouncy" Moore of University of Oregon soard 26 feet for a meet long jump record to highlight the opening day of the Pacific-8 track and field championships. The old record was 25-8¾ set last year by teammate Tom Smith.

Other winners were Washington's Jim Johnson with a meet record of 8 minutes, 47.6 seconds in the grueling 3,000-meter steeplechase; Cary Feldman of Washington in the javelin at 236-6 and Southern Cal's 270-pound Dave Murphy with a 64-3 shot put.

FORT WORTH, Tex.—Argentina's Roberto de Vincenzo shot a four under par 66 and pulled into a tie at 136 with Lee Trevino and Bob Smith for a one-stroke lead in the second round of the $125,000 Colonial National Invitational Golf Tournament.

Stanford Rips Cal By 11-6

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Bob Reece started Stanford to an 11-6 Pacific-8 baseball win over the University of California Friday with a two-run single in the bottom of the second inning.

Bob Boome added a solo homer in the third and drove in another run for the tribe while Hank Snider had three hits and a pair of RBI's for the winners.

The two teams met today at Berkeley. Each team enters the final Pac-8 contest with identical 8-8 records.

Santa Clara '9' Tops All-League Baseball Team

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Champion Santa Clara placed seven players on the West Coast Athletic Conference all-league baseball team, the WCAC announced Friday.

Bronco shortstop Duane Larson was named the most valuable player. He led the Broncos in hitting with a .427 average and stole 11 bases.

The coaches couldn't decide between Santa Clara's Jim Caviglia and Loyola's Bill Eller as the all-star catcher, so both were named.

Other Broncos on the team are pitchers Rich Troedson and Don Paxton, second baseman Bill McMonigle, third baseman Curt Lorhke and outfielder Bruce Bochte.

Another second baseman, Willie Baptist of Pepperdine, also was named to the first team.

Others named to the team were pitcher Ralph Garcia of Nevada, Las Vegas, first baseman Bill Curran of University of San Francisco, outfielder Robbie Sperring of University of Pacific and outfielder Bill Strickland of Loyola.

Today is Saturday, May 16th, the 136th day of 1970 with 229 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning stars are Saturn and Mercury. The evening stars are Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

On this day in history:

In 1866 the Treasury Department was authorized to manufacture and place in circulation the first U.S. five cent piece, called "the nickel."

In 1929 the first Oscar Awards were held. Among the winners were actress Janet Gaynor, for her role in "Seventh Heaven" and actor Emil Jennings, who starred in "The Way of All Flesh."

In 1962 U.S. forces arrived in Thailand to bolster the Asian nation against the spread of fighting in neighboring Laos.

In 1968 the Defense Department announced 562 Americans had been killed in Vietnam during the week of May 11th, the highest weekly toll up to that time.

A thought for the day: Roman poet Virgil said, "Yield not to misfortunes but press forward boldly in their face."

How The Unethical Declarer Made A Very Clever Play

You won't like today's hand unless you have a certain sympathy for the clever thief. If you always rooted for the Sheriff of Nottingham to catch Robin Hood, you'll see only the dark side of South's play.

WITH ACE

Declarer won the first trick in dummy with the ace of spades and saw that he needed four club tricks to make his slam. The question was how to play the clubs to guard against a bad break. Any normal club break would assure the slam.

One way is to take the ace of clubs and then lead the ten for a finesse. This works if West has club length, but loses in the actual position.

Another way, slightly better mathematically, is to lead the six of clubs from dummy and take an immediate finesse with the ten of clubs. If this should lose to an honor, South would plan to cash the ace of clubs and then take a finesse with dummy's K-9 if nesseary. This works when East has strength or when West has length, but loses if West has the singleton jack or queen of clubs.

FINDS OUT

Declarer wanted to lead a club from dummy but didn't know whether to play the ace or the ten from his hand. Instead of stewing about it or trying to guess, he led the six of clubs from dummy and waited for East to follow suit.

After East had played the deuce of clubs, South casually and quickly played the queen of spades. West automatically followed suit with the three of clubs, and the cat was out of the bag. South knew that West had not started with the singleton queen or jack of clubs.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

"I beg your pardon!" South exclaimed. "I pulled the wrong card. Please take your club back." And South withdrew the queen of spades in order to substitute the ten of clubs.

It will be a long time before the other players in his game will trust South, but they have a certain admiration for his cleverness.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with 2 no-trump (22 to 24 points), and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠- J 10 9 7
♥- 8 6 5 2
♦- Q 10 8 7
♣- 3.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three clubs, the Stayman Convention, asking partner to bid a major suit of four or more cards.

If partner can show a major, you will raise to game since then your singleton will have a value. If partner bids three diamonds, denying a major, you will have to bid 3 no-trump and hope for the best.

No Animals

ABERYSTWYTH, Wales (AP) —Posters for a touring circus claimed the performance would include lions, bears, a llama and a buffalo. But the paying customers weren't shown so much as a stuffed mouse. The owners claimed that the trucks bearing the animals had been delayed. But they were fined 50 pounds for false advertising.

State Parks Become Convention Spots

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — State agencies are increasingly using state parks as meeting sites instead of hotels and motels in the larger cities.

A spokesman said the move helps fill state park lodges during the off-season and gives employes a chance to think better in rustic surroundings without the constant ringing of telephones.

Mill Valley: Woodsy, Recreational, Serene

Viewed from the air, Mill Valley's forested slopes appear as the community's most dominant feature. This photo, taken over the eastern slope of Mount Tamalpais, shows the community flanked by wooded hills except at its eastern border. There, Richardson Bay, is clearly visible entering from top center and ending in marshland at left center. Above the bay is Highway 101 and the Strawberry Shopping Center (upper left) and to the extreme right is Tamalpais Valley. As part of the growing need for recreational facilities, the proposed site of the Mill Valley Yacht Harbor is pictured as the vacant area near the tip of the bay. The busy Miller Avenue business district may be seen leading from the wider portion of the bay. In the direct center of the photo, surrounded by trees, is the central business district, with the spiral-roofed Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church standing out. To the lower right of downtown area is the Old Mill School on Throckmorton Avenue and across from it is West Blithedale Avenue. Along the lower edge of the photo is the beginning of the eastern slope of Mount Tamalpais, where numerous homes and swimming pools are camouflaged by the trees.

The Many Interests Of Al Newman

It may seem a thousand light years removed from working as a candy butcher on an Ohio River boat to serving in a key capacity with one of the country's most successful radio stations. But such has been the career of Terra Linda's Al Newman.

A list that seems endless might well be highlighted by his well-known work as a Marin artist, by the many fine acting jobs he has turned in for local groups, by his interest in organic gardening or by his ability to play — although he describes his technique as "very bad" — the guitar.

ALL OF THOSE interests got their start when Newman was an undergraduate at both Ohio State and Kent State colleges. He worked his way through school in part as a stand-up comic appearing in nearby nightclubs.

"Often I had engagements on a Sunday night and then would drive all night to get to class on time. Many times I sat in a Monday morning class still wearing my tuxedo," Newman recalls.

On one of the last real showboats on the Ohio River, Newman accumulated much of his show business background. As the boat steamed from port to port, he often found himself alternating among several roles—as actor, host, candy pitchman, even doing vaudeville bits that he would write.

"A SHOW WE did in West Virginia was a far cry from the Ross Valley Players," he reminisced. "We did what we thought then was a highly sophisticated comedy, but the audience was full of mountain folk who came barefooted, rolled bottles down the aisles and fed babies sitting on their laps."

Newman went on to appear in a number of stage productions, did more nightclub stints and once was even billed as the back end of a dancing horse.

The well known "Good Night, Ladies" was the play that changed his life.

It opened in Chicago and led to a cross-country tour in which he (a) first arrived in the Bay Area and (b) met his wife-to-be, Patti.

"AT FIRST," he explains, "Patti came on too strong and I couldn't stand her. Just too much vitality for one person."

But Patti also had done a lot of musical comedy, so the two eventually started a nightclub act, "kind of like Peter Lind Hayes and Mary Healy."

He joined KSFO in 1959 as an "on the air" personality with Bob Arbigast. As Arbigast and Al, the two proved highly popular and this led to Newman's staying at KSFO and his present responsible position as program director. That he knows what he is doing is supported by reams of surveys and statistics that time and again show his station as one of the most-listened-to in America.

AND FOR BAY Area residents, his serving as program director has had added benefits.

"In radio today," he explained, "you must communicate with the listeners. You must always come across honestly. You can't be super slick.

"In days past you might think of radio as a means of talking to a large group of people but today it is all on a one-to-one basis, person-to-person. You must be aware of your listeners' feelings, what is happening, and you must always relate to the listeners."

Commute traffic reports, for example, have been highly developed to cover every possible happening in Marin, with newsmen Chet Casselman, who lives in Greenbrae, and Jeff Skov, who lives in San Anselmo, reporting from their cars while planes fly overhead between San Francisco and Novato. California Highway Patrol sources are checked constantly.

OTHER NEWMAN — KSFO innovations include the station's news presentation format, heard on the half-hour. It does away with the orthodox third-person reports that are usually heard from a commentator and, instead, most often takes the form of conversation between the newscaster and the personality.

An example of KSFO flexibility occurred when personality Pete Scott of Sausalito, listening to news one morning that proved to be especially harsh — murders, riots, accidents — suddenly stopped the newscaster with "I've heard enough. I just can't take any more now." The station immediately switched to playing records.

It was the type of thing that many would like to say and do but never have the opportunity.

"RADIO IS very human," Newman claims. "People relate to radio. You can't have set formats or sound plastic. You must always have a rapport with your listeners.

"Radio should be informative and entertaining and it must al-

"What Made The Holes In My Housedress?"

It appears that some chemical has come in contact with your dress. You may question this. You may think you do not use chemicals. However, every homemaker uses bleaches, cleaning compounds, scouring powders, toilet bowl cleaners, lye, drain cleaners, etc. Frequently cleaning rags containing these chemicals are tossed into soiled clothes hampers. These soiled rags will ruin clothing and linens they rest against.

Adding bleach to washing machines before they fill with water may cause holes in any item the bleach contacts. Clothing on the floor often catches spilled bleach and holes appear after a few washings.

Yes, Mrs. W.O.C., you use many chemicals every day, any of which can make the holes you found in your housedress.

AL AND PATTI Newman enjoy a quiet moment together in their Terra Linda home as a busy day comes to an end. Both have backgrounds in show business. And they met when Al came west with a traveling company performing "Good Night, Ladies." They remain active in little theater.

ways be honest. The way you are in life is the way you should be on the air."

With this in mind and thinking of today's troubled times, Newman and his staff have helped to develop an unusual and highly successful 12-hour program they call "Laff Off." The idea proved so outstanding that many stations throughout the country have copied their idea of broadcasting nothing but 12 hours of humor.

Newman has always led in the current — now fashionable — ecology program field.

TIBURON'S CARTER B. Smith started broadcasting daily smog reports in the Bay Area and Sausalito's Terry McGovern has just released a record on pollution and its perils, called "Genesis — Last Chapter," with all proceeds being contributed to the Save the Redwoods League.

Another of the station's personalities from Marin, Jack Carney, has worked with many major charitable and civic groups in his home county, with the annual Mountain Play, and has even served as a town councilman in Ross.

He is past president of the Terra Linda Art Association where his paintings and sculptures have received fine praise. (A year ago he had a highly successful one-man art show at Rubini's, in Fairfax.)

HE FINDS time to act with the Ross Valley Players where he recently starred in "A Thousand Clowns," a role that had him on stage almost the entire performance.

Newman enjoys puttering in his garden where he uses organic gardening techniques. ("Cans above the plants are used to scare the birds," he adds, "and it makes the whole garden look like a giant montage.")

He also collects tropical fish.

THE ENTIRE Newman family, in fact, is an active one. Wife Patti also has acted in Marin theater groups, has sung for numerous civic organizations in the county and has written and directed special skits for Santa Margarita School.

The entire family likes to sing together and often Lauri, 11, Tracy and Becky, 10, and Dan, 7, pause from their busy school and activity schedules to join in a sing-along.

Newman adds, "The Newmans also consist of a dog named Odie, two rats and two turtles."

Always displaying a civic interest, Newman helped inaugurate the Police Athletic All Star Softball Game in which he and his station's personalities meet the Bay Area's top celebrities for charity. The 1970 game — slated for June — will bring together all the DiMaggio brothers playing on the same team. It has grown to where the San Francisco Cow Palace (in Daly City) gets a capacity crowd for the contest.

"THE GENERATION gap meets on KSFO," Newman claims, "as we try to relate to all segments of the community and to all ages. We try to bring new music to all ages."

That generation gap also meets and mingles congenially in the Newman household where the entire family enjoys skiing and tennis together. Newman's son often joins him for a health jog around the neighborhood and his daughters share the pride in the blue ribbons he has received for his art.

Art, theater, music, gardening, radio, skiing, show business are all "key" words that conjure special, differing meanings to almost everyone. But for Terra Linda's Al Newman family they merely sum up one well-coordinated way of life.

AT LEFT, a popular radio team of a decade ago was Arbigast and Al, composed of Bob Arbigast and Al Newman. It brought Newman to San Francisco radio station KSFO. Newman remained there, becoming eventually the KSFO program director in which capacity he has developed the programming that has made the station one of the most-listened-to broadcasting outlets in the country.

James Black, Marin Pioneer Cattle Baron

Once A Sailor, He Prospered As A Rancher And Land Owner

(Editor's Note: This is one of a number of manuscripts completed by the late Florence Donnelly, Independent-Journal historian, prior to her death. The articles will continue to be run from time to time in the Marin Magazine.)

By FLORENCE DONNELLY

James Black was born Jan. 1, 1806, in Inverness, Scotland, far from Marin County where he was to become a pioneer land and cattle baron. He was the son of a contractor who later moved his family to Liverpool, England.

At an early age, James Black became a sailor, serving on different ships on voyages to South and North America. On one such voyage he became ill on board ship with typhoid fever and was put ashore at Monterey in January, 1832, to recover.

AFTER HE regained his health, he and another Scot, also a former sailor, Manuel Edward McIntosh, formed a partnership to hunt otter along the coast between San Luis Obispo and Bodega.

At the directions of Gen. Mariano G. Vallejo, Black and McIntosh, accompanied by still a third ex-sailor, Irishman James Dawson, moved into the Bodega region to keep their eyes on the nearby Russians.

McIntosh earlier had been baptized a Roman Catholic to qualify for Mexican citizenship, which was granted him in 1833.

THE MEN built a redwood house on the Rancho Estero Americano within rods of the Russian settlement of Kuskof. And as the only naturalized Mexican citizen among the trio, McIntosh asked for and was granted title to the rancho.

This infuriated Dawson who is said to have sawed the redwood house in half and to have moved his portion of the structure elsewhere. Later, however, Dawson was to receive the grant to Rancho Canada de Pogolimi in Sonoma.

Black and McIntosh remained steadfast friends, and the former built an adobe house at the western base of Jonive Hill. To it he brought his bride, Maria Augustina Sais, in 1844, and there, the following year, their daughter, Augustina, was born.

BLACK WAS granted the Rancho Canada de Jonive title, but in 1847, he traded it to Jasper O'Farrell for land in the Nicasio Valley.

At Nicasio, Black built a large two-story house. His wife, a sister of Don Domingo Sais who had been granted Canada de Herrera in Marin, was happy to again be near her relatives. The Sais family was a large one, much given to visiting and fiestas.

IT WAS A time when land was cheap, and Black bought thousands of acres, extending his empire from Nicasio to what is now Point Reyes Station. He bought Rancho Olompali and land to the north of it.

It was in 1847 that McIntosh sold his Rancho Estero Americano to Jasper O'Farrell and came to make his home with his long-time friend, James Black.

BOTH BLACK and McIntosh were astute business men, careful to record every transaction in black and white. Evidence of this was the will made out by McIntosh June 12, 1846, bearing the signatures as witnesses of such figures as Francisco de Haro, William Hinckley, John A. Sutter, P. B. Reading and Jasper O'Farrell.

Black was interested in civic affairs, serving as Francisco de alcalde (a position later also filled by McIntosh). He was one of the justices in the first Court of Sessions in 1850, a body whose duties included setting the tax rate, fixing townships and election precincts, auditing county books and authorizing public construction and property acquisition.

HE WAS county assessor from 1850 to 1853. Walter Skidmore, a deputy assessor, listed Black's property in 1853 as:

"Two leagues of land in Nicasio, Nicasio houses, three lots in San Rafael, one and two-thirds leagues at Olompali, tame horses, wild horses, mules and asses, six yoke of oxen, tame cattle, wild cattle, swine, fowl, mortgages, bonds, money due, growing crops, potatoes and grain, script."

Black built sturdy houses for his ranch hands and their families, as well as spacious barns and stout fences and corrals.

HE AND "Old Mac," as he called his friend McIntosh, rode with the vaqueros, rounding up cattle.

When night came, the two pals would ride to the ranch house for a quiet, restful evening in the company of the gracious Maria Black. The daughter, who now called herself Mary Augustina, was a boarding student at Notre Dame in San Jose, coming home only on summer vacations and for holidays. But while at the ranch, she had a grand time riding horseback with her father and "Old Mac" over hills and through valleys.

She was a pretty, dark-haired girl. In her teens, she was already courted by many young men who rode to the ranch to see her.

OTHER OLDER men came riding to the ranch in 1863 when copper was discovered there, and excitement soared when gold was found on the Sais ranch. Prospectors poured into the area.

But the Marin Journal reported six months later the "results were very unsatisfactory. The whole matter, in our opinion, was a scheme of sharpers that resulted in a grand fizzle."

The marriage of Mary Augustina Black to Dr. Galen Burdell, a distinguished-looking New Yorker, who had become a San Francisco dentist, took place in the Nicasio ranch home Oct. 6, 1863. Black and his wife were pleased by the marriage and gifted their daughter with Rancho Olompali after stocking it with horses and cattle.

FOR A SHORT time the newlywed Burdells lived in San Francisco. Then he gave up his practice and they moved to Olompali.

BLACK WAS inconsolable, becoming a changed man as he lost interest in everything. His daughter and her husband tried to spend as much time as possible with him and to cheer him up, but without great success. And a niece from Wales who arrived in the fall of 1865 to keep house for Black described her uncle as "forgetful, pacing the floor and picking at his meals."

Black, the broken man, began, however, to find some solace with another woman. She was Maria Pacheco, whose husband, Marin pioneer Ygnacio Pacheco, had died Nov. 29, 1864.

NEITHER MARY Burdell nor Manuel Edward McIntosh were pleased when Black and Mrs. Pacheco exchanged marriage vows on June 26, 1866.

The niece from Wales also disliked the new Mrs. Black, claiming she had been put off the ranch "in the dead of winter without a cent in my pocket."

AND UPON her return from the East where she had traveled with her husband, Mary Burdell, too, developed a dislike for her stepmother which apparently was reciprocated. James Black, then dividing his time between the Pacheco residence and the Nicasio ranch, asked his daughter not to visit him while he was in the Pacheco home because her presence "caused trouble."

A large number of members of the Society of California Pioneers, in which Black held an honorary membership, attended the funeral services and the interment rites in Mount Olivet Cemetery. But "Old Mac" could not be present to say farewell to his friend. He, too, was ill, and he died in November of that year. He was buried beside Black.

WHEN MARY Burdell read her father's will, she was furious. He had made some minor bequests to friends, given $5,000 to each of his two sisters and a thousand acres of land to his niece. But the bulk of the estate was willed to his widow and her children.

The medical report listed as the cause of Black's death "softening of the brain." Claiming her father was unsound of mind when he signed the will, Mary Burdell instructed her lawyers to contest it in court. That was the beginning of what was to be long and bitter litigation.

On Sept. 10, 1870, the Marin Journal reported: "On Friday of last week the matter of the Black will case was given to the jury at about noon and after six or seven hours of deliberation, it being found there was no likelihood of their arriving at a decision, they were discharged. The trial of this case lasted about two weeks."

A NUMBER of legal luminaries had participated, including James McM. Shafter, representing Mary Burdell, and Sidney V. Smith, lawyer for the widow.

Since both women were well-known through the county, their legal dispute had served to divide Marin into two opposing camps.

Witnesses on both sides were for the most part prominent Marinites. And the small adobe courthouse was packed with spectators.

MRS. BURDELL testified that her father had suffered a number of bad falls, and also said she had not been invited to the marriage of her father and Mrs. Pacheco. The niece, too, testified that she had been uninvited to the wedding.

Many witnesses testified that Black drank heavily after the death of his first wife. But U. M. Gordon said that while Black would take a drink, "he would not transact business when drunk," and that he was "a man of commonsense."

Thomas W. Davis described Black as much changed after the death of his first wife, as fitful and erratic. But former Marin Sheriff Peter Austin said Black was "prompt" in paying his taxes.

SEVERAL witnesses said Black was "tight-fisted" in his business deals, but capable of episodes of generosity.

V. D. Doub and Jacob Short both testified that Black was sober when he signed the will soon after marrying Mrs. Pacheco.

Mrs. Black, who spoke only Spanish, testified through an interpreter. She said Black was godfather of three of her children and that he had promised to treat them "as if they were his own."

TWICE MORE the contest of the will went to trial in Marin and twice more the jurors failed to agree upon a verdict. It was then decided that "a fair and impartial trial" could not be held in the county where both parties were so well known, and the case was moved to the probate court in San Francisco.

The trial opened there March 16, 1874, with the San Francisco Evening Bulletin headlining its story: "The Great Black Will Case." Columns were devoted daily to coverage of the trial.

Again there were hordes of witnesses, and the Marin Journal noted:

"IT NECESSITATES, loosely speaking, the attendance of half the population of the county."

The case was now complicated by the fact that Mrs. Black herself was engaged in contesting another will — that of her beautiful young daughter, Teodora Pacheco, who had died Dec. 25, 1873, and left her estate to her fiance, William Goldstein. And by the injury to one of the witnesses, Dr. A.W. Taliaferro, who had been Black's doctor, and who, on March 23, 1874, was waylaid and wounded by a bullet. But Dr. Taliaferro did recover in time to testify in the Black trial. And Mrs. Black did succeed in her efforts to have Teodora's will set aside.

THEN, ON April 3, 1874, after six hours of deliberation, the San Francisco jury returned a verdict in favor of Mary Burdell. Dr. Burdell marked the triumph by taking out all those who had testified on his wife's behalf for a celebration.

But it was a Pyrrhic victory.

James Black Story: Financial Success, Domestic Strife

Nicasio Rancher Built Empire That Triggered Long Litigation

It was reported that Mary Burdell paid lawyers' fees of approximately $100,000. And the widow Black retained title to some of the valuable Nicasio ranch.

Now Mrs. Burdell turned from sorrow and litigation to the beautification of her beloved Rancho Olompali.

THE LATE Mrs. George Boyd (Margaret Kittle) of San Rafael wrote: "to Mrs. Burdell belongs the distinction of building the first ambitious garden in the county... As a bride she commenced redesigning the grounds, grading in front of the house in long, graceful terraces toward the bay." And now Mrs. Burdell began traveling extensively, and from Japan brought back Oriental trees, shrubs and flowers for her garden.

Mrs. Boyd told of the garden's formal design, laid out beneath pines and eucalyptus, with brick paths radiating from a circular flower bed in front of the house. On the outer edge of the wheel was "the first planting of exotics in the county." And a large redwood tree, "grown it was said from a seed found in the crop of a quail killed at Fort Ross," was a focal point.

AFTER THE railroad was built, Burdell's Station was established on the ranch. There were happy days at Olompali as trains brought friends to the rancho where the Burdells' son, James Black Burdell, and daughter, Mabel, were now growing up.

These pleasant times ended when Mrs. Burdell died Jan. 23, 1900. Newspapers reported the funeral was held "from the old adobe ranch house." And the Feb. 12, 1900, issue of the Marin Journal noted that Mrs. Burdell's will had been filed for probate in the office of Marin County Clerk Robert E. Graham.

To Dr. Burdell, she left the dwelling at Olompali, the furniture, paintings, library, orchard, one-half the Nicasio rancho, one half the garden, five ranches and 50 additional acres of land. All this was to go to Mabel upon her father's death.

TO THE daughter was also bequeathed jewelry and a portion of the Nicasio ranch.

DR. BURDELL died April 9, 1906.

The old adobe ranch house was beginning to succumb to the elements, so that a more pretentious two-story home was built around it. Encased in its walls were those of the adobe.

THE JAMES Black Burdells' son, James B. Burdell Jr., married Irma Aspey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Aspey of Camden, N.J. Their daughter, Charmaine, is the wife of Antonio Veronda.

Mabel Burdell, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Burdell, was married several times.

But there was no male descendant to carry on the names Black or Burdell that had once been so prominent in Marin County.

And historic Olompali met with a final tragic fate when, after being sold and rented several times, it was gutted by fire in February of 1969, the flames exposing the remnants of the adobe dwelling that had seen so much Marin history made.

BILL WALLER OF San Rafael poses with two of the boat models he has constructed and then slipped into glass bottles. Waller specializes in creating replicas of their vessels for Bay Area boat owners. As for how he gets them through the necks and into those small bottles, turn to Pages M10 and M11 for a pictorial demonstration, thanks to Gil Pearson's pictures.

How Those Boats Get In The Bottles—

Marin Hobbyist Shares Secrets Of How He Creates Display Pieces

By GIL PEARSON

Have you ever wondered just how the heck they get boat models inside bottles?

There are a flock of little tricks in pulling this off successfully, but if you want some challenging fun you can do it yourself by learning from a young man from Marin. Or, for a wee fee, he'll do it for you if you want to present someone with a bottled model of his very own boat.

Bill Waller of San Rafael has been putting models of local boat owners' vessels into bottles for several years. He taught himself how to do it using the trial, error, grunt, groan, and ultimate accomplishment method.

"I FIRST CARVE the hull, mast and deck fittings, working from photos or sketches," Bill told us the other day at the James E. Howard Co. where he is general manager.

Warming up to his subject with enthusiasm, this experienced seafaring fellow—now an entrenched landlubber with wife and children—laid bare the secrets of his avocation.

"I build, assemble and paint the model outside the bottle. This includes cutting out wrapping paper sails, printing insignia and sail number, and attaching the American Flag which I cut from a six-cent stamp.

"I USE METAL paper clips for the hand rails and for hinging the mast base to the doghouse. Oil paint is laid down inside the bottom of the bottle for a sea-water effect. After inserting the boat and sealing the bottle, I rest the bottled model on a rectangular tubular glass stand.

"All of this is mounted on a trophy-shop-bought mahagony base to which is added a jeweler-engraved nameplate bearing names of boat and owner."

The moments of truth in boat-bottling business come with the insertion through the narrow neck, and with uprighting the mast once the model is secured inside. Precise demonstration of these delicate techniques is best accomplished via the accompanying photos.

THIS ENERGETIC young man began his hobby a while back when he had an interior decoration need to fill a hole in his living room wall from whence he had banished a television set. Why not a model of his sloop?

So he collected some scrap lumber lying around, and glue, paint, thread, pins, paper clips and wrapping paper. And pitched in to find out how to do it. And did it.

Many other bottled models followed, including those of Gregg Hergot's 27-foot sloop in Santa Cruz, Gerry Kiebanarr's 30-foot Erickson at Loch Lomond, Bill Simmons' 27-footer in San Rafael, and Dr. William E. Malin's 27-foot sailboat at Loch Lomond Yacht Club.

Waller's current commissions for his glassed-in replicas are for an Off Shore 40, a 26-foot Thunderbird, the schooner America, and—as well—the renowned 35-foot Touchee, an Alberg Bay racer owned by Mill Valley's Robert Potter and berthed at the San Francisco Yacht Club in Belvedere.

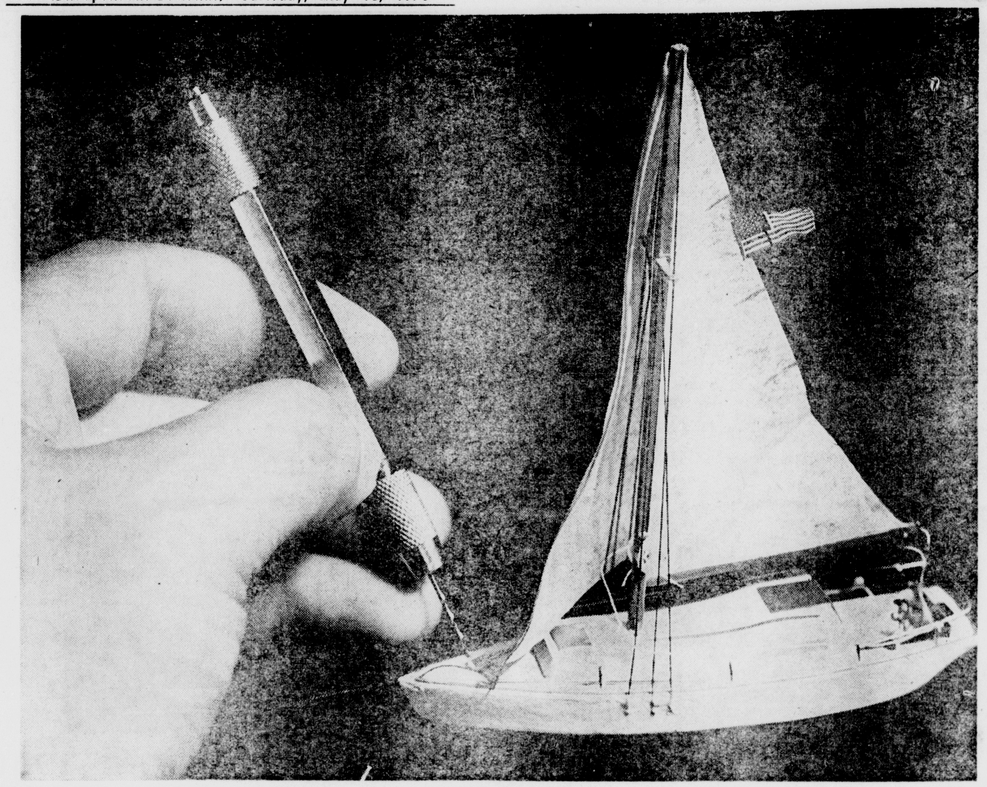
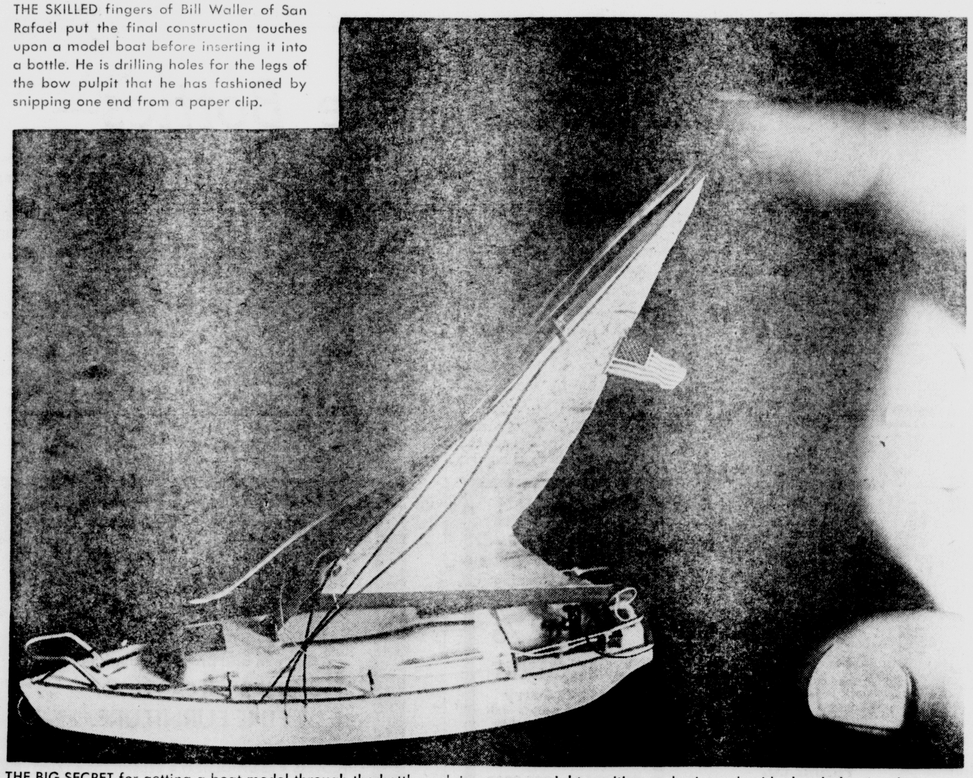
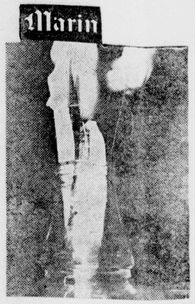
There's A Trick To Bottling Boats—Here's How



THE SKILLED fingers of Bill Waller of San Rafael put the final construction touches upon a model boat before inserting it into a bottle. He is drilling holes for the legs of the bow pulpit that he has fashioned by snipping one end from a paper clip.

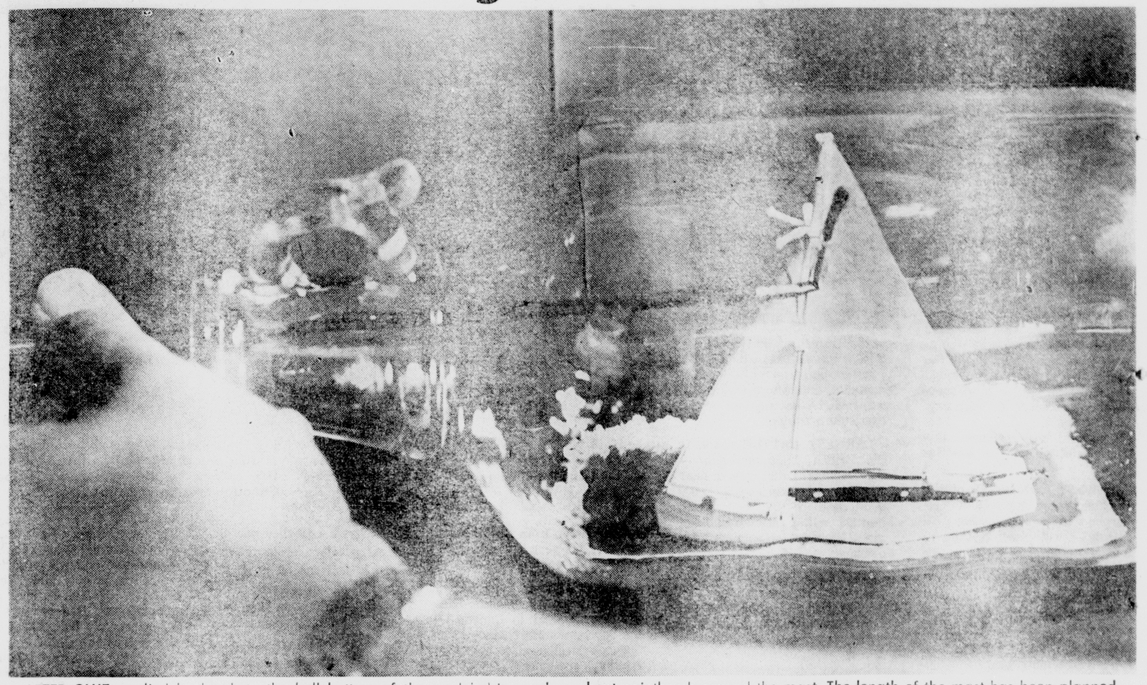


THE BIG SECRET for getting a boat model through the bottle neck is the makeshift hinge that hobbyist-craftsmen like Bill Waller install at the base of the mast. This permits the mast to be lowered from an upright position to horizontal with the deck. Another paper clip end is passed through the hole in the base of mast, then secured into the cabin top.



COVER PHOTO

TRICKIEST of the maneuvers involved in bottling a boat model is the insertion of the miniature craft through the inch-and-a-quarter neck without damage to the tiny hinge he age. Thanks to the tiny hinge he has installed, Bill Waller is able to fold the sails so that they will not be creased. He pushes with the index finger while holding taut a pulley thread that runs through an eye in the bow and thence to the top of the mast. It is always a tense moment for the model-maker who could see hours of work ruined in a fraction of a second. (Photos by Gil Pearson)



AFTER GLUE applied by brush to the hull bottom of the model dries and anchors the boat to the bottle, Bill Waller uses both hands to raise the mast by drawing the pulley thread running to the mast top and by hooking a bent paintbrush around the mast. The length of the mast has been planned so that it is the exact diameter of the bottle and thus fits snugly against the bottle's topside. Now the most delicate work is over.

THE FINISHING touches to a sailboat already inside its bottle include the use of a bent paintbrush to wet all the black thread shroud lines so that they will shrink and become taut. The wrapping paper sails are also wetted so that, in drying, wrinkles will be eliminated. The last step is the sealing of the old cider bottle with a new champagne cork to keep out moisture and dust. A model boat, bottled, represents about eight hours work for Bill Waller.

The Land Of Superlatives

The Travel Pages

A huge chunk of south-central British Columbia, lying within or close to the popular Figure 8 highway tour, is perhaps unparalleled in its galaxy of remarkable attractions.

The new Yellowhead Highways 5 and 16 form a part of this 910-mile, figure-eight-shaped motor route that gives the tour its name. Sprawling from northeast to southwest B.C. with the interior "hub city" of Kamloops as the cross-over point, with Tete Jaune Cache as the northernmost point and Merritt at the south, this corner of the world contains some of the most spectacular wonders to be found anywhere.

Consider, for instance, this short selection of the superlatives:

NEWEST CONQUEST of the Rockies — the spectacular Yellowhead Highways, linking central B.C. with Jasper, Edmonton and Northern Alberta, already attracting thousands of motorists — especially trailer travelers who like the lower altitudes, easy grades and broad curves.

HIGHEST MOUNTAIN in the Canadian Rockies — Mount Robson, through whose 12,972-foot shadow the new Yellowhead Route passes.

BIGGEST NATURE—Taming project in Western Canada — the harnessing of the turbulent Columbia River by three huge dams — Mica, Arrow and Duncan — which are creating lakes so vast that all the existing maps of British Columbia will have to be redrawn.

HEAVIEST SNOWFALL of any city along the entire length of the Trans-Canada Highway — this at Revelstoke, which is the jump-off place for visits to Mica dam-site, and where skiing, not surprisingly, is regular school curriculum subject.

LARGEST CATTLE ranch in the British Commonwealth — the Douglas Lake spread near Merritt, which runs some 12,000 head on more than half a million acres that roll across strikingly beautiful sub-alpine meadowlands.

BIGGEST SMOKEY Bear in the world—this gargantuan forest-fire warning stands at the side of the highway just west of Revelstoke, and filling out his 33-foot, 10½-ton frame required more stucco than would normally go into two good-sized homes.

LONGEST LAKE Shoreline in B.C. — which, at close on 1,000 miles, gives a good idea of the beautifully indented character of Shuswap, since in acreage it ranks only seventh in the province. Its Indian name means "shimmering water" and it manages to be a completely-serviced waterbaby's paradise without any intrusion on its natural beauty. Shuswap Lake also boasts "the houseboat capital of Canada," Sicamous, where four houseboat-rental operators offer more than three dozen top-notch houseboats of all sizes to vacationers seeking "to get away from it all" on an unusual vacation treat.

BIGGEST CASE of collector's fever in Canada — Three Valley Gap, a unique ghost town in the Monashees west of Revelstoke, whose seven-plus (and still growing) acres of historic buildings have been collected by one young man, 37-year-old Gordon Bell, and have been completely fitted and furnished with authentic Canadiana at a cost to date of more than half-a-million dollars.

MIGHTIEST SOCKEYE salmon run in the West — it happens yearly in October at the Adams River, when some 305 acres (less than half a section of land) of the riverbed becomes a solid threshing mass of scarlet, comprising in a peak year up to 12 million sockeye, coming home from the ocean to spawn. This year is a peak year in the four-year cycle.

FIRST MAJOR commercial development by Indians on Indian reserve land in Canada — the Sportsman Motel complex at Spences Bridge is a complete facility, including restaurant, service station and curio shop. The Indian management is competent and hospitable and will happily guide you to some of the . . .

FINEST STEELHEAD runs on the North American continent — these in the bars and pools of the turbulent Thompson alongside the Trans-Canada Highway where catches of the fighting steelhead average 16 pounds.

MOST ACCESSIBLE waterfall wonderland in the West — three of the most magnificent falls in Wells Gray Park are within a few steps of the park road. Helmcken, the highest at 450 feet, has been called one of the most spectacular in the world and is just one of six falls, all on just one of the park's rivers — which gives an idea of the extent of nature's bounty here.

MOST HISTORIC mileage in the entire Canadian Pacific Railway's length — Eagle Pass in the Monashees awaited discovery to make possible completion of the nation-linking railroad. The site of the last-spike ceremony at Craigellachie is just alongside the Trans-Canada Highway.

MOST SPECTACULAR major-highway drive in the world — and others than British Columbians have said this of the Rogers Pass. It's 92 miles of superb highway that took some 12 million cubic yards of grading material to ribbon it out along precipitous mountainsides and across plunging chasms, with panoramas of peaks two miles high on either side.

FIRST USE of mortar-fire to bring down avalanches of snow before they can build up to disaster proportions. This ingenious concept, now used in many parts of the world, was initiated in Rogers Pass.

MOST DISASTROUS development project in the West — Walhachin, today a sun-and-sagebrush ghost valley where once was planned the most enterprising center of commerce and culture in the new Canada. One man alone sunk a million and a half dollars into the orchard project, which, at its height, had fine hotels, acres of fruit-bearing trees, a piano of Paderewski's in the community hall. Agent of disaster was the Great War — 97 of the 107 male population loyally enlisted and (condemned, some say, by an Indian curse) hardly any came back. Walhachin returned to the wilderness.

MOST IMPRESSIVE man-made crater in the West — demand for copper created this 700-foot deep terraced hole at Craigmont Mines near Merritt, and in the first five years 40 million tons were excavated from it. In Merritt itself, they'll sell you a copper-colored Stetson so that you won't forget.

MOST "INSTANT" community in the West—Cache Creek, which a few short years ago, was a fork in the road graced by a general store, an ancient auto court and a few cactus plants. Today it is a neon-lit oasis of hotels, motels, restaurants and service stations, whose glow at dusk can be seen from miles over the sage brush hills.

Many other fascinating points of interest lie around the Figure Eight. Perhaps not all of them warrant such superlative adjectives to describe their beauties, but the visiting tourist to British Columbia can expect his enthusiastic western hosts to use them.

IT IS HARD to tell the dudes from the real cowboys on the many working guest ranches that dot the spacious British Columbia interior. The availability of such budget vacations is only one of the many attractions offered U.S. citizens by the more rural sections of Canada's western-most province.

WHY NOT SEE LONDON ON A BICYCLE?

There are no traffic hold-ups, no parking problems. It's fine exercise, and the cost is extremely low. Nobody stares at a bicycler in London.

Charges are $3 to $4 for the first week, and a little less for the second, with a $12 deposit.

Write the British Cycling Bureau, Greater London House, Hampstead Row, London, N.W. 1. The bureau provides an information service for cicycle-oriented visitors. There are dozens of recommended routes designed to show the best of particular areas in London.

One includes a 26 mile tour through the old "villages" on the southwest outskirts of the capital. Be sure to include an international postal certificate.

Copenhagen Swings For Young Visitors

Other Scandinavian Capitals Also Have Their Attractions

By JIM WARD

COPENHAGEN (UPI) — If you're young and visit Scandinavia, you'll find that Copenhagen swings best, Stockholm also swings if you give it a push, and Oslo takes its pleasures sedately.

All three countries—Denmark, Sweden and Norway—are beautiful if you know where to look, exciting if you are adventurous and rewarding if you come prepared to enjoy them.

Copenhagen probably is the most receptive to youth, except that few cities charge so much for so small a drink. Waiters tire of explaining that they are bringing a drink, not a sample.

THE TIVOLI Gardens in Copenhagen are a special experience, day or night—a mixture of amusement attractions, flower gardens, pantomimes, concerts, shows, and beer halls. Most of the big restaurants in Tivoli are expensive—figure $15 at Bel Terrase or Divan One or Two.

The Little Mermaid is another bit of Copenhagen charm, sitting on her stone in the water a few feet off the Langelinie Pier. And a trip through the canals of Copenhagen is cheap and provides a charming picture of the old town.

Absolutely free and one of the best attractions in the Danish capital is the Walking Street (Strojet), a one-mile eye-catcher running through the capital packed with shops and stores featuring silver, porcelain, furniture and, most of all, modern clothes for young people. All the big names in Danish design are represented and ear-splitting music blares while you window-shop.

Good Copenhagen restaurants give you a three course meal for under $10, Restaurant Scott at the Graabroedretory is a solid eatery around the $5 mark if you substitute beer for wine, and the Yum Yum in Town Hall Square specializes in hamburgers. Hotel rooms are scarce and high.

YOU CAN meet other foreign students at the Studenterfoeringen near Town Hall Square, or at night at the Disc Club or Club Six rock-and-roll establishments. Admission to dance places such as "Adam and Eva" at Noerregade is $1.50 on weekends, beer costs just under $1 and many Scandinavian girls, as a gesture of good will, don't mind being asked to dance by foreigners even if they are escorted.

A pleasant trip outside the city is north to Hamlet's castle at Elsinore. Stopoffs are suggested at Louisiana Museum, where the surroundings are idyllic and the art collection of moderns entrancing, and at Bellevue Beach for girl-watching. Don't swim—pollution.

Swedes are more formal than Danes, but there are 13 lively discotheques in Stockholm where you can buy a beer for $1 and dance all night. For daytimes, start at Sweden House, the tourist center in midtown, and pick up the English-language pamphlet "This Week in Stockholm."

IF YOU like museums, Stockholm has 52—the most popular is Skansen, an open air exhibit, admission 60 cents. It offers farm house replicas, restaurants, and concerts.

Big hotels are expensive and youth hostels only relatively cheap—one is a white sailing ship permanently anchored in the harbor. Dinner at a cafe or pub can cost as little as $2, and at the Corner House snack bar in the center of the city, a hamburger is 60 cents.

Oslo has only two nightclubs, which serve only wine—at high prices. No liquor is served on weekends or before 3 p.m. weekdays, and dining out can cost $14. The city's hostel for young people costs $2.80 to $5.60 a night and good hotels are nearly double that.

THE COLORFUL waterfront buildings of Copenhagen cause this young visitor from America to put her movie camera to work, recording memories of her stay in the fun-filled Danish capital city.

Madrid, Lisbon Are Inexpensive

By WILLIAM B. LYON

Madrid (UPI)—Madrid is relatively new as Spanish cities go—only about 400 years old—and it has a charm all its own.

For young people who want to stay off the Prado-and-palacio beat, one way to combine night-time sightseeing, inexpensive but exotic dining—and possibly meeting other young people—is a tour of tascas, or taverns.

You wander from one tasca to another, drinking a short wine in each and sampling its food specialty—octopus in its ink, mushrooms, mussels, snails, baby eels in garlic, shrimp, Spanish omelet, meat on a stick, blood sausage and dozens more.

OR TRY THE ancient mesones where you can drink pitchers of wine, meet young Spaniards and sing Spanish folk music.

Late at night you return to your pension or hotel—both available for a few dollars a night if you shop around—stand outside and clap for the sereno (night watchman). He bangs his stick on the sidewalk to let you know he's coming, pulls out one of his immense keys to open the door, then takes a peseta (or nothing) and says, "Until tomorrow if God wills it."

During the day there's the Rastro (flea market) where you can haggle over a cardboard suitcase or a cavalry sword or a painting. For dinner, there are restaurants offering three courses for 10 pesetas (15 cents).

This might leave enough budget leeway for dinner at Botin's, a favorite of the late Ernest Hemingway, that specializes in roast baby pig or lamb.

With Madrid as a base, day trips are possible to Toledo, Segovia, El Escorial and the Valley of the Fallen, Alacala de Henares and Cuenca. Trains honor Eurailpasses, buses are cheaper and more fun, but hitch-hiking is only just catching on in Spain.

IF SPAIN tends to be conservative, Portugal definitely is so—but it offers wonderful beaches, beautiful scenery and inexpensive meals and lodging.

Lisbon, the gateway to Europe, also is the gateway to the Costa do Sol (Sunny Coast) that stretches 20 miles to Estoril and Cascais. The beaches are sandy, the climate sunny—but the water tends to be cold.

In Lisbon itself, the Moorish quarters of Alfama and Bairro Alto with their narrow, steep cobblestone streets are a must, and the views from the city's seven hills are magnificent. The zoo is one of the best in Europe as is the aquarium in Dafundo on the western outskirts.

Pensions are inexpensive and camping parks are available all over the country, with one of the best in Monsanto Park outside Lisbon and another about 10 miles down on the coast of Oeiras.

Meals in Lisbon's good restaurants cost from $1.25 to $1.50, but the ubiquitous tascas offer food for about 70 cents.

The Harrison awaits your pleasure

If you'd like an active holiday, this is the place to come. There's golf on a mountain-rimmed course. Boating and water skiing on the lake. Swimming in heated pools. Riding, tennis. Even a program of supervised activities for children. But Canada's Distinguished Resort can turn on the charm, too, with dancing and entertainment nightly in the Copper Room. Celebrated international cuisine. A choice of 200 rooms, suites and bungalows. The Harrison awaits your pleasure now, in a matchless mountain and lake setting. Only 3 hours from Seattle, 1½ hours from Vancouver, British Columbia. See your travel agent for reservations.

Insight Into Rich Segment Of America

LOSING BATTLES by Eudora Welty; Random House, 436 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Suzanne Hock.

"Losing Battles" is a novel that has to grow on you.

The reader is dropped smack dab in the middle of a family reunion in rural Mississippi. It is all very confusing as anyone who has ever wandered around a large gathering of total strangers will testify.

All 34 characters are talking their heads off, and the reader begins to feel it is indeed a losing battle to get through the book. Then slowly, the characters turn into people and the chatter takes on meaning. Suddenly, one realizes this is a narrative describing a rich segment of American life reminiscent of Wilder's "Our Town."

The Renfros are a poor but hard working farming family living during the early years of the depression. The annual reunion brings the uncles, aunts, cousins and grandchildren together for a huge feast and a lot of talk. There on a warm summer evening in the farmyard, amid the left-over chicken salad and watermelon, the history of the family starts to unfold.

One by one each character comes to life as he recalls his role in the ups and downs of the family drama. Long-kept secrets are divulged and lost battles are relived.

As it turns out, everyone has lost at least one battle in life. The blue-eyed hero, as innocent and honest as Lil' Abner, was sent to the state penitentiary for a minor offense. The orphaned heroine is told at long last who her real parents are . . and is disappointed. An uncle, guilt-ridden for killing a man, cuts off his own hand.

But for all the lost battles, Miss Welty keeps the story buoyant with humor by her use of the vernacular. "Now well's run dry and river's about to run dry. Around here there ain't nothing running no more but snakes on the ground and candidates for office. And snakes and them both could do that in their sleep," said Uncle Dolphus.

As a native of Mississippi, Eudora Welty has written colorfully of an area she knows. As a fine author, she has written with great compassion of the resiliency of the human spirit.

Severest Critic Of Them All

MAX JAMISON by Wilfred Sheed; Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 260 pages, $6.50. Reviewed by Marji Parr.

"Critic, review thyself" is the theme of "Max Jamison" — about and by an outstanding critic, Wilfred Sheed (of Life magazine, etc.).

It's the fictionalized account of an overly-intellectual man who rarely can have an uncluttered urge, but must analyze each thought and desire. His sell-out to commercial success and back again to honorable poverty are traced, with a perversely idealistic wife at the whip.

This lady is perhaps the most articulate husband-buster of modern literature. Captured by Jamison when she was a malleable student, she responded so well to the education he gave her that she out-critics him by the end of it. He comes to name his conscience Helen II.

As a study of male loneliness (a strange and compelling thing, at least to a female reader) for his sons, for anyone, "Max Jamison" digs deeply. There is a solitary Sunday breakfast . . . the gutted grapefruit, the cornflakes sticking to the empty bowl.

Laughter has its place, too, in Sheed's hands: a Kafkaesque touch of the game humor in every-day tragedy. Not surprisingly, the author is an expert at a turn of phrase; there's many a read-aloud giggle in Max Jamison.

Some Help For The Overeaters

Obesity, writes Dr. Theodore Isaac Rubin, self-described "formerly fat psychiatrist," is as much a disease as alcoholism.

It is not, he adds in his "Forever Thin," a physical or physiological disease, but rather "an emotional disorder, a neurotic constellation, a psychiatric problem."

Like the person addicted to drugs, alcohol or tobacco, the victim of food addiction must understand the basis of his problem before he can confront it.

And like the alcoholic, too, he must understand that he can never be cured. His problem can be only arrested.

Not surprisingly, considering his profession, Dr. Rubin says "consultation with a highly qualified psychiatrist is the best route" — preferably a psychiatrist who has also been trained psychoanalytically.

"The psychoanalyst knows that removal of hidden fears will result in removal of fat and that removal of fat will help reveal and resolve more and more problems, resulting in growth in a healthy direction," he writes. "The analyst is interested in removing the cause of the symptoms, in changing the basic sick ways of relating, and, in so doing, removing the need for the symptoms."

This small book offers some clues for the identification of food addicts — a preoccupation with food and weight, habitual mouth activity, repression of angry feelings, a clinging to the status quo, sometimes a subconscious fear of becoming thin, etc.

And it advises: "It is extremely important to know that obesity is controllable but incurable. Our position, as I mentioned, is similar to that of the controlled alcoholic . . . however, the alcoholic has the advantage of being able to live without alcohol. We cannot live without food and, since total cure is not possible, food for us will never quite lose either its symbolic or addictive value . . .

"Knowing that we are arrested addicts will make us cautious and effective. The only alcoholics who 'succeed' are those who realize that they are never cured. The same effective realization applies to us . . .

"It is true that we will never be true-thins, but we can be realistic and happy obese-thins for the rest of our lives — and only we need know the difference."

Dr. Rubin, out of his professional background and his personal experience, just may have written a book more truly helpful to fatties and overeaters than all of the diet guides in existence with their contradictions and superficialities.

Making Expenses Fit Your Income

THE TIME-LIFE BOOK OF FAMILY FINANCE by Carlton Smith, Richard Putnam Pratt and Time-Life editors; Time-Life, 415 pages, $11.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

In these times of simultaneous inflation and recession, finance, on the family or on the international levels, was never more complicated. Near-limitless credit but the rising costs of using it, advertising often more confusing than helpful, burdensome taxes, an unsteady market all add to the difficulty of planning.

In this book two economic experts who collaborate on a syndicated column, "Your Personal Finance," offer their authoritative advice on the sound management of family income, admitting that such has never been more difficult.

Situations and problems differ so much among families that it is exceedingly difficult to compile a single manual that meets all or most needs. Seemingly, Smith and Pratt with the help of Time-Life editors have come as close or closer than most writing in this complicated field. It is a well-arranged, articulate and helpfully illustrated book. Most readers, while they may encounter sections and whole chapters of little interest to them, should find sufficient material to justify the cost of the book — high though it seems — particularly if they are feeling a financial bind and having difficulty fitting their expenditures into their income, or concerned about their failure to accumulate that "nest egg" for the future.

English Master Of Chillers Writes New Spine-Tingler

John Blackburn has been called "today's master of horror," and his newest novel, "Bury Him Darkly," should not detract from that reputation, even though it is hardly on a par with his much-praised "Children of the Night."

In "Bury Him Darkly" Blackburn builds his chills around an 18th Century scholar and eccentric, the brilliant but decadent Sir Martin Railstone, whose tomb has remained sealed.

A group of present-day admirers of the curious and perverse Railstone dogmas are determined that his tomb must be opened and its mysterious contents examined. The Church of England clergy entrusted with the security of the tomb are equally determined that it shall remain unviolated.

Eventually the Railstone fanatics triumph over a stubborn ministry. But their entry into the tomb liberates horrors and perils that have been entrapped there for centuries. All England is endangered before the menace is eventually tamed by a martyr.

"Bury Him Darkly," however, was not a complete success for this reader because it seemed to require a difficult change in attitude midway through the book. What began as almost a comedy spoof with caricatured characters suddenly dropped its comic air and became deadly serious. The adjustment is not an easy one for the reader who finds it hard to take the principals and their plight as seriously as full appreciation of Blackburn's ingenious plot demands.

Still, fans of "chillers" will no doubt savor this effort by a skilled specialist in spine-tinglers.

The Fastest Saw, Longest Whiskers And 'Mostest' Bird

By DON KEOWN

Bet you didn't know that the man with the most tattoos — 4,831 — on his body was a Canadian, Vivian "Sailor Joe" Simmons, now dead?

Or that the world record for reducing was set by wrestler William J. Cobb when he "trimmed down" from 802 pounds to 232 pounds and reduced his waistline measurement from 101 inches to 44 inches in three years?

Or that the record for the fastest amputation of a limb in the pre-anesthetic era was set by Robert Liston of Scotland in the early 19th Century when he hacked and sawed through a patient's thigh in 33 seconds — and lopped off three fingers from his assistant's hand in the process?

That the record for fasting is 382 days? That the longest lived mammal, excluding man, is the killer whale? That the most numerous of all birds is the chicken? That the longest beard measured 17 and a half feet? That the record for non-stop hairdressing is 46 hours, 30 minutes. And the longest engagement was for 67 years?

All this trivia and much, much more can be gleaned from the pages of the new ninth edition of brothers Norris and Ross McWhirter's "Guinness Book of World Records."

It is by no means devoted entirely to oddities and curiosities. The book listing some 15,000 highests, lowests, biggests, smallests, fastests, slowests, oldests, newests, loudests, greatests, hottests, coldests, strongests, "mostests," etc., can serve as a most useful reference work.

There is, for instance, an excellent compilation of sports records.

There is, too, sound statistical information from such fields as science, literature, the arts, politics and the business world.

But helpful as its more sober data can be, we have a strong hunch that the appeal of this amazing book — it has sold more than five million copies in its earlier editions — lies primarily in its role of a fun book.

There is something irresistible and impressive about a compendium that informs you that the record distance for throwing a two-pound rolling pin was established by Sheri Salger at Stroud, Okla., on July 19, 1969. Her distance — 138 feet, 11 inches. And that the world's fastest psychiatrist was Dr. Albert L. Weiner of Erlton, N.J. who dealt with up to 50 patients a day, using narco-analysis, muscle relaxants and electro-shock extensively. The doctor was not only slowed down but brought to an abrupt stop in December, 1961, when he was convicted on 12 counts of manslaughter from using unsterilized needles.

Arm yourself with this new edition of an old favorite and you are guaranteed ample conversation fodder to feed your social chit-chat needs for decades to come. More important, you are also guaranteed hours of reading amusement. And, upon occasion, the ready answers to some really serious research questions.

GUINNESS BOOK OF WORLD RECORDS by Norris and Ross McWhirter; Sterling, 543 pages, $4.95.

APPARENTLY not even Kenneth H. Cooper, M.D. and Air Force Medical Corps lieutenant colonel, was prepared fully for the great impact when he introduced the exercise system he called aerobics a few years back.

It became the means to physical fitness for hundreds of thousands Americans. And Cooper's greatest triumph came when the Air Force adopted it officially as part of the training of its personnel.

Now Cooper has updated and refined his system in a new book, "The New Aerobics."

Aerobics is a program of vigorous exercise—the kind of sustained effort that stimulates heart and lung activity for a period of some duration — as a method of attaining physical conditioning. It involves distance walking, running, cycling, swimming, calisthenics, games such as handball and basketball. To determine the participant's true physical state, Cooper has devised a point system based upon oxygen use.

"The main objective of an aerobic exercise program," he writes, "is to increase the maximum amount of oxygen that the body can process within a given time."

And this depends upon efficient lungs, a powerful heart and a good vascular system — the organs whose capacity for work is the best index of a person's overall fitness.

In his new book, Dr. Cooper has made finer adjustments for differing age groups, provided a special section for women, added new exercise options and included new data tables. He has also added new safety requirements for persons just beginning the exercise program — requirements that are most important.

Sedentary America has shown a reawakening to the benefits of vigorous physical activity, as noted in the jogging and cycling we now see among all ages. Hopefully, Dr. Cooper's new book will spur on these health-seekers. Cold, hard points provide a rating system that is absent from most exercise programs, so that participants really have no certainty as to their progress or lack of it.

THE JUNE selection of the Literary Guild is "First on the Moon" by the Apollo 11 astronauts, with John Galsworthy's classic "The Forsyte Saga" as the alternate choice.

"ADA," THE best-selling novel by Vladimir Nabokov, has been published as a $1.25 Crest paperback by Fawcett World Library.

ARCO Publishing Co., 219 Park Avenue South, New York, has issued paperback reprints of four huge-selling books in the health field:

"The Low-Fat Way to Health and Longer Life" by Dr. Lester Morrison first appeared in 1958 and was one of the pioneer publications urging the elimination or reduction of fats in the diet as a means of curbing hardening of the arteries and heart attacks. It reached the best-seller lists and is frequently quoted in more recent books in the field.

"The Jack LaLanne Way to Vibrant Good Health" marks the first paperback appearance of the livewire writer-lecturer-television personality's Prentice-Hall published hardcover book of 1960 that sold more than 130,000 copies. It is a complete and exuberant exposition of the well-known LaLanne diet and exercise regimen.

"The Doctor Who Looked at Hands" by Dr. John M. Ellis, copyrighted in 1966, is an exposition of the use of the controversial Vitamin B6 therapy in treating arthritis, rheumatism, etc., with a dietary program rooted in the earlier work of Dr. Lester Morrison.

"Cosmetics: Trick or Treat?" by Toni Stabile is an updating of the Ralph Nader-type exposure done by a reporter who spotlights the public dangers posed by unsafe grooming and beauty aids. It is, indeed, an impressive investigative job.

MANY A MEMBER of the older and middle generations still has fond memories of the era when the big excitement of the day was the drive down to the railroad station to see the train come in and, hopefully, some passengers debark. Those stations ranged from stark wooden shacks in towns and hamlets to ornate structures such as Le Grande Station, Los Angeles, shown above as it appeared in 1893. The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe photo is among the 300 illustrations in Edwin P. Alexander's nostalgic "American Railroad Stations from 1831 to 1920," published by Clarkson N. Potter Inc.

It's a Roger West yarn, and this time the personable Scotland Yard superintendent and his colleagues are delving into a crime series that involves the British movie-making industry.

Even as he investigates, West wrestles with the personal problems and moods that confront all of us from time to time.

Creasey is not only a most prolific writer, but also a most consistent one. Novel after novel have pleased his legions of readers. "A Part For a Policeman" will extend that splendid record.

Some more new releases from RCA:

Bigard and Nicholas are two New Orleans hot jazz clarinets who have had long and fruitful careers and are still alive and well.

The clarinet is unpopular at the moment on the jazz scene, but these two created some of its high points in the past. Bigard has been associated with the Duke Ellington Orchestra for many years, and the eight tracks on his side of the disc were recorded in 1940 and 41 with an Ellington small ensemble. "C Blues" is a classic.

Nicholas' eight tracks date from 1935 and have more of a "chamber jazz" sound.

FANNY BRICE—HELEN MORGAN—RCA Vintage LPV-561 RE:

Two legendary performers of theater and Tin Pan Alley are preserved for the delectation of the 1970 ear in this most enjoyable LP.

Just compare Fanny Brice's "Second Hand Rose" of 1921 with La Streisand's of today and my guess is that you'll opt for the original scratchy version. The monologue, "Mrs. Cohen at the Beach" is a scream and unexpectedly doesn't seem dated at all.

LEO REISMAN, VOLUME I—RCA Vintage LPV-565:

This disc will bring back a lot of memories for anyone over 40.

Reisman's band was a very popular show biz and dance band, and his live appearances and radio shows featured such singing personalities with the band as Fred Astaire, Gertrude Niesen, Lee Wiley and even composer Harold Arlen. All these people are heard among the 16 nostalgic cuts on this disc.

Journey back into the 20s and 30s with the smooth romantic treatments of tunes like "Night and Day," "We're In the Money," and "Someday I'll Find You."

When The House Roof Begins To Leak

Handyman's Page

By ANDY LANG

The question of whether a roof should be repaired or replaced is a perplexing one for the home owner. Even a competent do-it-yourselfer finds it difficult to make a wise decision, since the roof usually is one area where he seldom employs his handyman talents and so has a limited knowledge.

There is one rather general rule-of-thumb that should be considered. If a roof is fairly new and has suffered damage from some outside cause, such as storms or falling objects, or has developed a small leak, the chances are that it can be repaired without too much trouble. But an old roof which is worn and causing problems is probably past the stage of repair because of the likelihood that, should a repair be made in a particular area, further deterioration will occur at another spot. This is because a roof tends to wear uniformly.

WHETHER THE old roofing material should be removed or whether the new roof should be put on over the old is a decision that should be left to the contractor. He should inspect the old roof and its supports to determine whether there is warping, rotting or other structural defects. At the same time, he can determine whether flashing and other essential materials must be replaced.

You also will have to rely on the contractor to follow the best reroofing procedures as, for instance, the removal of loose nails and their replacement; the use of nails long enough to penetrate the old roofing to get a firm grip in the roof decking below; and various other steps designed to provide a smooth base for new roof.

This emphasizes the necessity of obtaining a roofing contractor in whom you have complete trust. Before selecting a roofer, weigh these factors:

IS HE WELL recommended? How long has he been in business? Does he have a reputation for getting the work done on time and does he deliver what he promises? When necessary, does he back up his work with service. Is he willing to furnish references? Is he insured for on-the-job accidents?

If you obtain estimates for comparison, be certain the roofers know what materials you expect them to put on the roof.

Before signing a contract, be sure it spells out in complete detail the work to be done, materials to be used, completion date and penalties if any, and warranties or guarantees. And it's a good idea to have contracts notarized and witnessed by a third party.

(For Andy Lang's helpful booklet, "A Homeowner's Guide to the Selection of Quality Roofing," send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, Post Office Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. (11743)..

Techniques In Sanding

The next time you're trying to sand a piece of furniture, try this technique for better results from Better Homes and Gardens new "Handyman's Book."

Softened finishes — especially in grooves and on corners of furniture pieces — are easy to remove with steel wool after you soak the wool in paint remover. Use steel wool on the softer woods where a scraper's blade may mar or damage surface while removing finish.

For a hand-rubbed finish, Better Homes and Gardens recommends that you use powdered pumice or rottenstone.

Build A Pergola For Privacy, And For Those Shade Plants

Every woman secretly enjoys admiring glances. But there's a difference between wearing a bikini on a beach and doing your own thing in your own backyard.

If you live on a level lot, there's a simple answer: build a six-foot fence. This will screen out 99 per cent of the passing population.

If your property is on the downhill side of a street, you're a "sitting bird" for curious stares from passers-by or neighbors. Your problem's tougher, but not insurmountable.

THE SOLUTION may lie in a sun and privacy screen — often called a pergola. In essence, it's a slanted sunshade that lets you do the day-by-day weeding, or just to lounge in comfort and seclusion.

Also, the pergola creates an area where you can cultivate shade-loving plants, such as begonias, fuchsias and clematis, that are dramatically beautiful, but shrivel in full sunlight.

First, four-by-four inch posts should be set in concrete. Cedar is a preferred species of lumber, but any western wood, if pressure-treated, will last for decades.

Then crossbraces for the screen are nailed or bolted to the posts at a 45-degree angle. The braces should be slightly lower than the posts so that the roof will slope backwards somewhat.

A STRONG BUT attractive beam structure can be made by nailing two-by-four-inch pieces on edge, to either side of each post and crossbrace. The ends of the beams may be sawn square or tapered. Then comes the screening itself, which may be one-by-one or one-by-two-inch boards, spaced to filter the light.

A sloping incline offers an excellent site for a raised planting bank, which makes for easier cultivation. Old railroad ties are popular for retaining walls, but lumber of any dimension may be used. Stakes pounded into the soil below ground level will anchor the wall.

Since the wall will be in contact with the soil, lumber should be treated with preservative.

INSTANT SHELVING

A SHELF SYSTEM designed by interior designer Binnie Kramer is attractive, easy to build and flexible in size. Adjustable shelves hang between fir two-by-two uprights on clips set into slotted metal standards, which are facing sides of post pairs. Uprights attach to a board nailed flush against the ceiling, creating a canopy effect. The finish can be paint or stain.

The Gardening Page

Plant Begonias For Later Color

There are many reasons tuberous begonias make wonderful garden flowers for the summer months.

The range of colors of the bright colored blooms, the growth of varieties in several heights, and the types of plantings you can enjoy are but three reasons Marinites enjoy tuberous begonias.

BECAUSE OF the varieties available, you can decorate your outdoor living area with tuberous begonias in pots and hanging baskets—or mass them under trees, against evergreen shrubs, or plant them with other shade-loving flowers. A planting of tuberous begonias in a raised bed is truly spectacular.

Gardeners may still find tuberous begonia bulbs to plant. More likely, nurserymen will have seedlings available and these ready-to-plant specimens make it easy to create a colorful summer atmosphere.

The blooms of tuberous begonias will face in the same direction as do the leaves, so be sure the leafed-out seedlings are pointed to afford a view of the flowers.

NEAR THE coast, give your begonias a home where they will have morning and late afternoon sun. Inland, plant them in more shade.

Tuberous begonias want good drainage—whether in the ground or in containers. Your nurseryman can recommend a planter mix to use in setting-out begonias. This is mixed with sandy loam—two parts to one part soil. After the plants reach five inches in height, feed with a recommended plant food.

Water-wise, keep the plants moist but not soggy.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

✔ There is still time to plant gladiolus bulbs. Planted now, the "glads" will provide you garden color and flowers for cutting into fall.

✔ Divide tall bearded iris after it goes out of bloom—but only if clumps are crowded. Every third year is about average for dividing them.

✔ Newly-planted citrus should be irrigated frequently. Make an irrigation basin around the trees and mound soil up so that the water doesn't come in direct contact with the tree trunk.

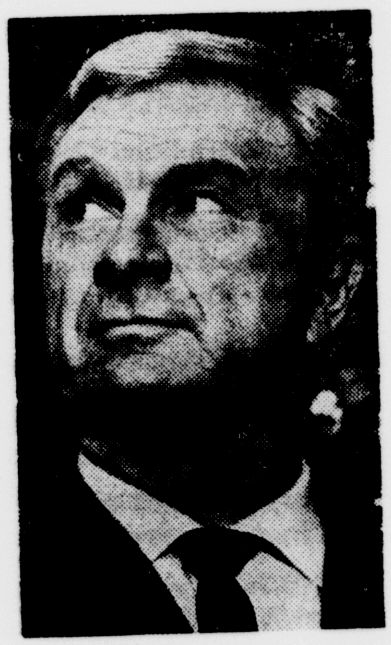
Eddie Albert Speaks Of Pollution Perils

By ROBERT MUSEL

MONACO (UPI)—The television comedy series "Green Acres" ranks high among the more frivolous if successful programs of the present day.

Yet star Eddie Albert has found a way to use the fame and some of the fortune it has given him in one of the most serious crises ever to face humanity, pollution.

The veteran actor has capitalized on the instant recognition he has acquired from the role in the United States and abroad to gain an audience which might otherwise have been less attentive to his argument that "we're in a lot more trouble from pollution than if the Russians had attacked us."



EDDIE ALBERT
A serious message

"THE FACTS on pollution must be distributed as rapidly as possible," he said at the 10th International Television Festival here, at which he was a judge. He took advantage of the gathering to announce formation of the Eddie Albert Production Co. to make educational films and visual aids on the subject.

"We hope to bridge the gap between the scientists on the one hand and the public and their representatives in government," he said. "If man doesn't do something he has not more than 40 or 50 years left on this planet."

Albert, who found a sympathetic listener in Prince Rainier—the Mediterranean which borders this little country is becoming polluted—said he had spent much of the last year speaking in universities and elsewhere in the United States.

"WE SHIP our last surplus bushel of wheat to India in 1974," he said. "There may be tragedies man has not yet conceived of in the offing, for example millions dying of famine in the next ten years. It can happen. We won't be the first civilization to die. The Sahara was once a lush Garden of Eden, you know."

Eddie had a dolorous tale to tell the schools.

"The California Pelican is gone," he said, "extinct in one year. They couldn't get the proper diet for their eggs. It could be hens' eggs next. The implications are profound."

"In Borneo they used DDT to kill mosquitoes. This contaminated cockroaches which were eaten by lizards which were eaten by cats which died so rats proliferated bringing silvatic plague. With the predators gone caterpillars ate up all the thatched housing."

Close to home Eddie said: "The once beautiful Mississippi has become the colon of America."

TV Turns Viewers Into Sleuths

By HOWARD A. TYNER

MAINZ, West Germany (UPI) — Among convicted murderers, Erich Wolf holds a certain dubious distinction — he owes his arrest to commercial television.

Wolf's crime provided the plot two years ago for the first of a series of West German TV programs called "Aktenzeichen XY . . . ungelost" (File Number XY. . . unsolved).

The show which encouraged millions of armchair detectives to help police crack real cases by phoning in information, was an immediate hit and has since blossomed into the most popular — and most controversial — TV program in West Germany.

IT HAS BEEN praised as the "criminal investigation method of the 21st Century," and also condemned as playing up to denunciation — prone Germans, making them neighborhood spies.

But Eduard Zimmermann, the 41-year old former police reporter who created, produces and moderates the show, laughs off his critics. He can afford to.

Each time "Aktenzeichen" goes on the air, 30 million persons from the Baltic Sea to the Alps, through Austria and Switzerland, sit glued to their TV sets.

"People feel genuinely threatened by the rise in crime rates and the inability of police to do anything about it," Zimmermann said in an interview. "They want to do something about crime and we give them the chance. So of course they respond."

ZIMMERMANN has written a best-selling book on "Aktenzeichen." He also syndicates capsulized versions of programs to magazines and newpapers.

In fact, the work load has been so great, he explained, that he and his three-man staff plan to move to bigger quarters in a suburb of this Rhine Valley city.

The program format is simple. Professional actors recreate actual crimes in short clips which appear on the show interspersed with a series of close-up still shots of suspects, weapons, car license plates and other clues. A policeman sometimes discusses the case.

The viewers are asked to telephone the studio or their local police station with any information they might have to offer.

THE RESULT? Take Erich Wolf, for instance.

Police were without clues after they found the partially decomposed body of a young girl in a pond not far from Frankfurt. For six months they tried to identify her.

Then they took the case to Zimmermann. He put it on his show and shortly afterward a relative stepped forward to identify the girl.

Wolf was a suspect in the killing. But he could not be found. He was arrested several months later after a bartender recognized his face from a second "Aktenzeichen" show.

ANOTHER TIME, two men broke into a German Army munitions depot near the French border. They shot down the five guards, four of whom died.

The fifth was able to describe his attackers. Police had only a few clues. After several months, they went to Zimmermann.

One day after the show, a fortune teller in Bonn, 100 miles to the north, became suspicious of one of her customers. She recognized his car's license number from "Aktenzeichen," rang police, and helped crack what Zimmermann called a "Mafia-type" organization in the area.

The show is not limited to murders. Each of the 10 programs a year is devoted to flashing on the screen mug shots of car thieves, burglars and habitual criminals sought by police.

OF THE 153 cases dealt with on "Aktenzeichen's" first 23 showings, 75 were solved, according to Zimmermann, through viewers' tips.

In that same time, 125 persons have been charged with crimes as a result of the show. Critics say the show is making Germany a nation of snoops, who turn in their neighbors for no reason. A handful of false arrests have been made.

Zimmermann also points out that after each show only about 1,500 calls are received — a tiny fraction of the viewers who could call if they so wished. He also denies accusations that he over-dramatizes his re-enactment of crimes.

"We never distort a crime," he said. "We just make it as interesting as possible. After all, people want to be entertained."

Zimmermann's plans don't end with "Aktenzeichen." He hopes similar programs will be set up in other European countries, to create what he calls a "Television Interpol."

ACTIVITY

Looking at the Gray Tree Squirrel,
Jumping through Trees,
Put to shame
Is my inactivity,
Woodpeckers,
Squirrels,
Compete for Acorns, nuts,
Forest goody things,
Balance and check,
Natural selections,
Forest, harmony, and activity,
Space and time,
Mr. Jay,
This part of forest
Is mine,
Mr. Squirrel,
Is mine,
Life in trees.

POINT REYES — C.B. GEARHART

They hung Lord Byron's stern
And transom in England's Newstead Abbey,
His sailboat, that was;

Will "Rafella's"
Liquid sailing glory
Of Sausalito antiquity
Be so lovingly preserved
